Cookie
is a great person and a sweet friend. I am glad that I got the chance to get to know you. We had had some good times in 1st and 3rd period. It's not be to hard on the guys.
Have a great summer.

Cookie -

Here you this summer -
Come here to school
Ready to hit it hard.
You're intelligence will pay off in the long run. Come in all
we next year
new whatever

Cookie,
To a real friend
and a great friend
I met the year. Hope to stay friends. Its been fun having you in my classes. Thanks for good luck in the future well as as has
Have a great Summer.

Are We Having Fun Yet?

Rrring....Rrring....Click, "Hello."

"Hey, are you ready for your first day of school?"

"Sure I'm ready. I've been ready for high school since our eighth grade graduation."

"Yeah, I know what you mean. It's going to be a blast!"

"So, what sports are you going to play? Who are you checking out this year? Are you going to go to some big party this weekend? Wow, I can hardly wait! We're going to have so much fun!!!"

Each student walked into school September 2 with high expectations and high goals for the school year. For freshmen, the walk in was totally new and for the seniors the walk was a time to make those final memories count.

By the end of September 2, each student had gotten all his classes and the homework was piled on. Athletes had sweated out their long and rigorous practices. Best friends discussed questions that had ironically changed from the night before school had started.

"Do you think he is ever going to give me the time of the day?"

"Do you think that coach is going to run points out of us?"

"Do you think we are going to have time to go to that party with all the homework they are giving us?"

"Tell me this!!! ARE WE HAVING FUN YET?"

Fun Days: Crazy Routines

RRRRing! "Wake up little Suzie, wake up!..." the radio blared as she sleepily turned to see what time it was. "5:30!?! It's too early, just five more minutes!"

"Oh no! 7:30! I'm late!" she screamed as her eyes popped out of her head and her heart skipped a beat. Frantically searching for something to wear, she threw on an old pair of jeans and a sweatshirt. She quickly ran out the door to catch her bus, but instead caught a glimpse of the bus as it whizzed away leaving her hopelessly behind. She had to walk to school, and made it just in time to hear the bell ring and her first period teacher yell, "Surprise! A quiz!"

Unprepared, she drearily put her books on the floor, began to work on the quiz, looked around the room, and said to herself, "I should have stayed in bed this morning!"

After a couple of months of having to go through the same schedule, day after day, it began to make a person a little wacko. Things like when you stayed up all night studying for a big test and you find out the next day that it isn't this Friday, It's next Friday. What about those crazy yearbook copy writers whose brains were totally drained from staying up all night writing yearbook copy and then having to write a three-page essay final the next day. When you planned the perfect weekend and at the last minute your parents told you that you had to stay home and babysit. These were just a few of those awful, but recurring things that had continued to torment us daily.

But what did make the day fun? "Listening to Donald Rose make fun of Roxanne during fifth period," replied Bryan Arnett. And for everyone it was those times--when you got to school and found out that you got an A on your history final. When you forgot to do your homework and the teacher said that it wasn't due until tomorrow. When you opened your locker and found a red rose signed "Your secret admirer". Those unexpected surprises were what got us through the day.

Anger and frenzy show on freshman Juan Garcia's face as he realizes he had his fingers on the wrong keys.

Chris Johnson gets the munchies and reaches for a Pepsi and a pickle while he relaxes enjoying the comfort of home.

It was Friday night. No one would be sitting home alone, according to Kim Overdevest. She sat unentertained on her bed, wondering what "the gang" would be doing. She certainly didn't want to miss out on any action--that would be embarrassing. The phone rang. It was Nikki Landrum who always knew where the hottest events took place. She informed Kim of the great party following the game. Kim was thrilled and dashed out to meet her friends.

On the other hand there was Marcel Avila. He believed staying home occasionally was a necessity for relaxation. Unlike Kim, he struggled through a hard week of homework and tests. He knew the cure was an episode of "Sledge Hammer" and a good night's sleep for tomorrow's hunting trip.

Both types were typical of those at R.H.S. School days were often very enjoyable. However, when day turned to night, something in people that seemed to come alive. Kristie Shannon, a mild mannered student during school hours, entered a new realm of excitement at night.

Many others shocked their friends with new personalities.

Leisure time was an important part of students' everyday lives. Each person's interpretation of a "fun time" was unique. According to Troy Brady's point of view, playing basketball was the best spare time activity.

Melissa Hoyt thought that going shopping was the best remedy for the school time blues. Students loved having free time, but usually looked forward to getting back to the daily grind.

Fun People : Make the Difference

"People are people, so why should it be? You and I should get along so awfully!" and so the song goes. But do we get along so awfully? I should think not! R.H.S. is a great place to be and a terrific place to find terrific people! "Everyone is so friendly here," said foreign exchange student Lars Nordal.

Cliques are a part of every school, and R.H.S. was no exception! One group of boys always, always lined up on the library wall (like it's gonna fall down!) scamming the girls. Another clique continually hung out in Ms. Platt's room. Still yet another group congregated in Ms. Barnes' room, catching up on homework, listening to the radio, gossiping, and eating lunch. There were also your everyday cafeteria and quad types. A certain aspect stood out above all else; even though students got involved with one particular clique, they never let that fact divide the unity of the "Bruin Family".

"Teenagers are looking for someone who has the same taste in clothes or enjoys the same activities because it gives a sense of reassurance for their own beliefs. It is a way of telling them that it's ok to do that or ok to believe that," commented sophomore Jennifer Allen.

Being enrolled in a small school tended to bring out a type of unity among the students. People knew others well and felt as if they were in the same little family. R.H.S. students were easy going and by nature a truly friendly bunch. You can get an education at any school, but the people here is what really made R.H.S. so fun!

Togetherness was the key as Jose Lopez and Toru Matsumoto limped through the three-legged race in the Halloween Pumpkin Roll.

"Could it be? What is it anyway?" questions Lance Lindsay, Tince Panero, Roland Gates, Carlos Castillo, Guillermo Manriquez, Jose Lopez, Tony Santos, Mike Jordan, and Jim Ruiz as they hold up the library wall.

Fun Activities?

From sun up to who knows when was the motto for most of the students at R.H.S. It was not normal to go to school at 8:10 and leave at 3:10. Normal was going to school at 7:30 and maybe getting home about 7:00 p.m. One would ask why? One would answer Activities.

Activities weren't just on Fridays and during spirit weeks. Activities were everyday occurrences —from going to practice and going to work, then finally coming home and doing a good two hours of homework. Sophomore Arron Smith stated, "School activities make your high school career enjoyable."

But this wasn't all. Add on setting up for a dance and participating in club events.

Students rarely had free time to themselves. If it wasn't for all those activities, fun or not, students would've been lost.

"Everyday was so hectic with homework and other activities, that sometimes I felt I was going insane. However, without the activities I would've felt I was missing something," stated sophomore Alissa Cox.

New Ideas . . . New Problems

How many of you have turned in that same book report for the last four years? Come on, be honest, well, don't plan on it any more because the new English curriculum guides came out. Based on the State Model Curriculum Standards they gave direction and consistency to English classes in the district.

They were designed to help students progress through concepts and skills in a logical order. Beginning in the ninth grade with basic skills and grammar, students progressed to literature in their sophomore, junior, and senior years. Although this was the first year they were used and the teachers were still revising them, "they seemed to work out very well," stated Wayne Montgomery, English teacher.

Although there weren't many problems with the curriculum guide, one problem the English Department faced was the library closures. When our library clerk retired, we had no librarian so the library was closed until a librarian was found. Not only was the school library closed, but the county libraries had to cut their hours. Principal Rob Peasley advertised for a professional librarian because, "...it was better to get a professional librarian than just someone to open the library. It was best for achieving our educational goals.

Mrs. Johnette Orpинeila and Mrs. Shirley Thrasher arrived in October to open our library for the second quarter. Mrs. Orpинeila, new district librarian planned to promote the idea that "reading was fun." Another idea she had was to put a special showcase up for each season.

"The library helps teachers and students enrich the curriculum."

Rallies Raise Spirit

Rah! Rah! Rah! Sound familiar? Not this year. English Department Chair Mrs. Susan Rich set a new pace for upcoming rallies by organizing the first rally. "It was very hectic, but I was very pleased at the way it turned out," she said.

The rally began when the band started playing the fight song. Then the faculty did a skit about school and grades. Mr. Montgomery, who played Grandma Bruin in the skit, told the tale while drama students and faculty acted it out. Mrs. Rich also introduced the football, volleyball, soccer, and cross country teams and their coaches.

Rallies were different this year because they were more organized. Each rally began with the band playing the fight song as students entered the gym.

Something that stayed the same were the cheerleaders. They still led the classes in the traditional count down cheer and performed other cheers and dances. The Creative Dance team also performed. Each rally ended with the student body standing and singing the Alma Mater.

Students who went to the rallies really enjoyed part ticipating in them. Allison McGrane, senior, commented, "I liked the class competitions, especially since the seniors ruled most of them." Mr. Fast added, "They involved more people in the rallies."

Lunchtime outdoor rallies were new. These rallies met with mixed reviews. One problem was that no one knew about them. Times needed to be announced in advance so students could plan to attend.

Rallies were successful in helping to create much needed school spirit.

"Rallies are fun because everyone acts crazy and it's o.k."

Traci Ramos

As cheerleaders get ready to do their routine, the crowd grows impatient.

Mr. Wayne Montgomery, also known as Grandma Bruin, tells a chilling tale to the cheerleaders and creative dance team at the first rally.

Have you ever wondered what it would be like to write with your left hand? Have you ever tried cutting with scissors upside down because they were made for right handers? How about when you tried writing in a spiraled notebook and were never able to because your hand was in the way?

These were just a few of the problems seven percent of the students who were lefthanded, faced in their daily routines. Kim Davis, sophomore, said, "It's neat being something that very few people are."

According to scientists, lefties use the right side of the brain. The right side of the brain is the creative side so lefties are usually more imaginative.

to write with both hands.

One problem lefties had was writing. The desks in most rooms were made for right handed people and angled so but if I don't, I can't write!"

Another problem was writing that important essay. While your hand was still trailing behind, the ink would smear on the paper because it hadn't dried yet. By the time the essay was finished, your hand was covered with ink.

But left handers had hope, people out there cared. They made special notepads with spirals on the right side so that you could start on the left side of the page. They even invented smearproof pens.

"Lefthandedness is: seeing everything backwards."

Dina Ortegon

When our left-handed parents were in elementary school they were taught to write with their right hand. But being natural left handers, they learned that lefties had to turn everything sideways in order to do their school work. Cindy Neidigh, freshman, said, "I get in trouble for sitting sideways in my desk

Time Consuming Electives

Art by dictionary definition is the production of something beautiful. Students on top of every other requirement had to take one year of fine arts. This included art, pottery, drama, chorus, band, creative dance, and foreign language. Like many other classes, these required a tremendous amount of work. Creative dance consisted of fifteen students who choreographed original dances and marched with the band. "It's really fun but it's also hard work," commented junior Michelle Conley.

However, the band and Jazz band had problems. Each of the classes "lost quite a bit of talent with the class of '86, and it's going to take a lot of work to get going again," said advisor Gerald DeYoung. Challenged, the band worked hard to improve.

A new class added to the fine arts department was Drama. The extra work in this class included memorizing lines, gathering props, designing sets, after school rehearsals and performing for local elementary schools. "It's a valuable class because it helped us to express ourselves and built our self confidence," said junior Ken Davis.

In art classes, enrollment was up. As a result one more art class and a ceramics class were added. Many students entered art contests in the area or submitted art to the Stanislaus County Poetry Anthology.

If you were not the creative type, you could still get your fine arts credits by taking a foreign language. Junior Carrie Burchett said, "A foreign language is something beautiful like poetry. It took many hours of practice to master it."

"Art inspires the mind, and opens the world of imagination."

chocolates, flowers, and Sharing candy hearts to show their love. "I sent three to my girlfriend with a hug from my heart," stated freshman Kaul Lopez.

Halloween was the weirdest holiday. When the sun went down and the street lights brightened the streets, children young and old dressed in weird costumes and walked up and down the city streets playing tricks and getting treats.

Other favorite holidays were Easter,

New Year's, July 4, Labor Day, and Memorial Day. Although students didn't know what Labor Day or Memorial Day were, they liked them because they got out of school. Easter and July 4 were traditionally spent with family. Students usually got together with close friends to celebrate New Year's Eve.

"Holidays are times of sharing your love and happiness with family."

Keeping Out Of The Red

One word group members dreaded to hear was fundraising. Groups needed money for many different reasons. Without fundraising, groups such as the Archive staff, student government, J-Club, and FFA would have been unable to plan field trips, buy supplies, or put on special activities such as the junior prom.

R.H.S. organizations were able to find many different ways to make money. Community Involvement was a program sponsored by Fax Roast Beef and Round Table Pizza where a fundraising group advertised to bring more people into the restaurant. In turn, the restaurant gave the group a percentage of the profits. This was a very popular and easy way of making money.

Hosting a dance was another popular fundraiser. Organizations had to find and pay for a D.J. or group, reserve the area where it was held, and decorate.

Sending messages along with candy to favorite teachers or friends during Christmas, Easter, Valentine's Day or whenever became another favorite. "I enjoyed selling Gobble Grams because I was making money for my class," stated junior Shelley Choate.

And let's not forget the traditional car washes and candy sales. They were popular with the Archive staff, the J-Club, and the cheerleaders. M&M's were always available on campus from one of these groups. Warm weather found students running around in bathing suits and getting into soap sud fights as well as washing cars.

No matter how we looked at it, fundraising was a big part of our lives. Even if we wanted to avoid them, we still found ourselves trying to sell something!

"I feel fundraisers are successful when the whole class participates... not just the given few." Sue White

Preparing For Future Jobs

Marty Harper slowly climbed the ladder to the roof. As he reached the top, he carefully shifted his weight onto the roof. He crawled across the skeleton roof to his place, sat down, pulled out his hammer, and began to nail the roof tiles into place.

But Building Construction was not the only vocational class taught at R.H.S. Others were wood shop, drafting, welding, auto shop, and business classes.

Building construction, auto mechanics, and welding introduced students to basic job skills such as responsibility, promptness and reliability. They also provided students with the entry level skills necessary to get these jobs. Students learned carpentry and plumbing, car repair and maintenance, and metal work.

Walking into wood shop, the smell of wood shavings and sawdust drew attention to the students. They learned basic measurements and how to make things such as shelves, chairs and tables.

Through the door to the drafting room was an entirely different environment. It was quiet as students learned basic skills in drawing floor plans.

Probably the most practical classes were the business classes. After taking typing, accounting, shorthand and computers, students were ready to get a job in any office. They learned to overcome the tired eyes, cramped fingers and sore backs of beginning typing. Fascinated by the patient blinking green cursor, students kept the computer classes full.

All Vocational classes taught students job skills by having students actually do them.

"Typing was fun and will help me get a secretarial job."

Totally engrossed in his science fiction novel, Wassim Absood, freshmen, misses his Algebra II lecture.

Laziness Detracts From Student Success

"what? F...no way!"

There were many problems that interfered with a student and his or her education. One of the many problems was students not paying attention in class. Doodling and talking were two of the reasons students didn't pay attention. Students found daydreaming about various subjects like Friday's game to be more interesting than listening to a monotonous lecture.

The majority of the students liked to "party" which meant different things to different people. To some it meant going to Rice Road or cruising McHenry. To others it meant going to the movies or a favorite food joint such as Burger King.

But what about sports, club trips, and field trips? Did these things distract students from their school work? Yes. During one week it was highly possible for three different clubs to have three separate trips and a student could belong to all of them. But not everyone's grades suffered from this problem. Some students put their school work first. Ineligible at the end of the first quarter, Melinda Banda, junior, said, "I got good grades by studying a lot."

Jobs also kept students from school work. Angel Reynoso, junior, stated he worked "for the experience and because I needed the money for my car."

As counselor Ms. Russelle Peterson stated, "Most students who were on the ineligible list were either freshmen, students who didn't care, or students who had bad study habits." Besides activities, high ineligibility was caused by students who didn't take school seriously.

Exchanging Cultures And Homes

EXCHANGE STUDENT—a student from one country received into a school of another country in exchange for one sent to a school in the home country of the first.

The biggest problem that arose for the exchange students was housing. R.H.S. began with seven foreign students and ended the year with only five. It seemed that most of them had some sort of housing problem.

Toru Matsumoto had to move out of his first host home because the Japanese system wouldn't allow more than one exchange student to live under the same roof.

Jeanne Wallet came to California from France and her host family was on vacation. She had to stay with different people until they returned.

Etsuko Tsuda came to California from Japan expecting it to be all beaches and lots of fun.

Even though Riverbank live under the same didn't have any beaches, she still liked it.

Confessing his love for America, Toru made himself a second year exchange student. He came back again because he wanted to graduate from high school in America.

Exchange students like senior Markus Reinhardt from Germany came to find out what America was like. He found it confusing at times. Markus laughed, "I was supposed to go to Fresno, but ended up in Riverbank and I didn't find out that this wasn't Fresno until three days later."

Joelle Ringoir, from France, came to see America and she also wanted to live with an American family to learn the way we live and our different culture. She found America interesting and agreed with what she had heard, American schools were fun.

History books, but were not able to solve the expensive problem for Economics.

But one thing was always the same, some students liked history and some didn't. Some liked the way history looked back into our ancestors lives. At times it was beneficial because it kept us from going around in meaningless circles and taught us not to make the same mistakes. "To make today worthwhile, we must know the past and profit from the

Some students didn't like studying history because it was boring to them. "Everything was the exact same thing everyday," commented Arron Smith, sophomore. Freshman Brady Buckingham disagreed saying, "When my teacher got so energetic it made me want to know more about it." Some new activities helped with this. Detention, referrals, suspensions, expulsions. These were a few punishments students at R.H.S. faced.

Vice Principal Mr. Rick Rezinias believed that the measures used were for the betterment of the students. "In-house just didn't make sense. A student cut class, so we took him out of that class for another day?" One solution to this would be to have Saturday detention. "I think since they took school time, they should spend their time improving the school."

Having no detention advisor meant that the detentions were held in the office. "It's a mess! We need someone to stay on top of it, Mrs. Thomasson and I have other things to do," said Mrs. Rita Tigert. Because Mrs. Thomasson and Mrs. Tigert were too busy to keep track of them, only honest students served. One solution to this was that students would serve detentions with the assigning teacher.

Some people thought the discipline here was ineffective. Mr. Elio Guerrini said, "One kid I've written several referrals for, but the office keeps sending him back."

Junior Patricia Patrick said, "Most students don't take punishment seriously. And with no in-house, the threat of detention is diminished."

Most students agreed that they would get in little or no trouble if they were to receive a detention. Since parents would never find out, many students didn't care.

Mr. Gerald DeYoung felt that the home had a lot to do with the attitude towards discipline. "If it were reinforced at home, the student might improve his attitude."

"Disciplinary measures at R.H.S. are useless and a waste of time."

All The Right Moods

As the fog rolled around, settled in, and the novelty of a new school year wore off, different moods shone from the faces at R.H.S. As the mornings, afternoons, and evenings passed so did the moods. No matter if it was frustration, happiness, sadness, or just plain craziness, R.H.S. students and faculty had all the right moods.

Moods were brought on by many things. From tons of brain wracking homework and frustrating computers to exciting

Friday night football games, students moods changed quickly with times and events at R.H.S.

"I really got depressed when our school lost a football game," expressed sophomore Darin Kelley.

It seemed expectations were always greater than reality. Some students were bored with coming to school and not seeing anyone new.

As June rolled around, those who had been frustrated, happy, bored, and sad just turned plain crazy. The exciting thought of summer was the main subject on everyone's mind. Keeping their minds and moods on school was almost impossible. Students couldn't wait to sleep late, go to the beach, go surfing, catch some sun rays, or meet new people.

"Oh no, we're going to miss the bus," cried the eight seniors as they rushed out the door.

The math department lost a class, trigonometry. Students who wished to take this class had to be bused to another high school.

This caused scheduling problems because students had to leave school at 10:50, fifteen minutes before their period was over. It was also a great inconvenience to activity schedule days.

Even so the students had some things to say. "It was a better class and I didn't mind it," stated David Livingston. But Mr. Edwards, the math department chair, had a different view, made the material a little easier to digest. "I feel that the math department has lost touch with the seniors who ended up taking this class and we could not do our job for them."

Most things in the department remained relatively stable. They lost one teacher who was never replaced. Some teachers had to double up to compensate for the loss.

Pre-algebra was changed to beginning algebra and they began using a new book published in 1997. This new edition stressed problem solving skills.

The goal of the math department was to meet the state framework guidelines. They focused on problem solving skills. Over 80% of the teachers went to regional solving workshops to learn this important thinking technique.

"By combining the standard course material with logic and extra thinking skills, we hope to better prepare our students for the real world," Mr. Edwards said.

"Come on, I only need a few problems. It's due next period. F-U-C-K-E-A-L-L-I?"

Kristin pulled out a barely legible crumpled paper and handed it reluctantly to Joan.

"You better give it back to me before 7th period though!" Kristin said.

"I can't worry, I will," replied Joan with a sigh of relief.

Plagiarism...the act of copying the work of someone else and claiming it as one's own. This problem had existed for many years. Everything from homework to finals had been cheated on, but was there anything that could be done to prevent it?

There were many excuses students used for cheating. Not finishing their assignments and the fear of receiving a bad grade were the main reasons students resorted to cheating. The majority of students felt these were good enough reasons to cheat. According to a survey, 81% of students cheated sometimes, mostly by copying homework.

Students thought of many creative ways to cheat. Writing the answers on the inside of a watchband or band-aid or coughing once for yes and twice for no were among the creative ideas. The less creative, but still efficient ways were asking somebody near you or writing answers on the desk.

Homework was due, but yours was incomplete. Did you ask a friend for her homework? Why not? After all, it's the only logical thing to do, right? Wrong. You can't learn by copying.

"I get disappointed when I see students taking the easy way out. You can't go through life cheating," said Mr. Penny Carl.

Lunch Is Not Just For Eating

As 11:54 a.m. finally rolled around you could have sworn that your stomach was not only growling but also screaming, "Feed me, feed me!"

While walking to your locker to put your books away, you walked cautiously to avoid being crushed by a herd of stampeding students, rushing to their various lunch spots.

"The best thing about lunch is taking a break from the monotony of school."

you squeezed back through the crowd to go sit at "your" table with your friends.

Some students felt that lunch should be longer because after waiting in line in the cafeteria to get your food, you barely had enough time to eat, let alone finish last minute homework. "More time was definitely needed! It took 10 minutes to get to your locker, to your car, and out of the parking lot.

Then, you had to go home, eat, and get back in time to rush to 5th period," stated junior Poncho Castro.

As for the variety of the cafeteria lunches, there were split opinions. Some students felt that the food was really good, but other students felt there wasn't enough selection and they weren't getting their money's worth. "It's very hard to get a good variety of food. I'm open for suggestions," said Shirley Algeo, cafeteria worker.

No matter how good or bad the cafeteria food really was, there were always those students who preferred to eat off campus. Lunch for them wasn't only for eating; it was time to get away from the monotony of class after class.

equipment and making many changes. Given permission to spend a portion of the $10,000 given for improvement of the science program, he bought lasers, microscopes, glassware, and wave machines. The new equipment allowed students to gain a better understanding of science by doing experiments.

Science classes offered were Earth Science, Physical Science, Life Science, Biology 1 and 2, Chemistry, and Physics. Field trips helped make science unique as classes ventured to exciting places like Yosemite, the Monterey Bay Aquarium, Marineworld Africa/SA, NASA, and even a boat trip on the San Francisco Bay. These field trips give students the opportunity to see and experience first hand things they were studying.

Sophomore Mearl Richison stated, "I didn't like science before. Then I realized how much it helped me in other areas." Many had the same opinion, while others thought that science was only useful for scientists.

Mr. Rule said, "Science should help students make the connection between the outside world and themselves. It allows them to experience how and why things work."

Activities Keep Clubs Busy

On campus were seven active clubs--Interact, Yearbook, MAYA, CSF, FFA, SADD, and J Club.

The J Club went to Yosemite, on a San Francisco overnighter to see two Christmas plays, on a ski trip, and to the Ashland, Oregon Shakespearean Festival. Members sold M&M's to raise money for these trips.

CSF had a new service activity--helping organize the library before the new librarian came. CSF was the only club that kept the tradition of decorating a car for the Homecoming Parade.

The Maya Club had a drawing, held bake sales, put together the Cinco De Mayo celebration, and took a trip to Marriott's.

Yearbook had many fundraisers to help pay for the yearbook. They sold chocolate santas and bunnies, pencils with the school's logo, M&M's, and held car washes and Rax and Round Table Nights. There were fun but educational trips that were only possible by students donating some effort and time to raising money. The staff went to different places to improve their journalism skills. They attended workshops and competed in writer-offs against yearbook students from other schools. They also attended the State and National Journalism Conferences.

FFA was the most active club. They had three activities each month. Their major fundraiser was painting addresses on curbs. Sophomore Ron SADD sent representatives to the National Convention in Santa Clara, helped sponsor the New Year's Eve Party in Turlock, and gave out "Contracts for Life" to help prevent people from driving drunk.

Interact was a service club which the Rotary sponsored. The fundraisers they did were the Wine & Cheese and the candy cane sale. Junior Isabel Scoto commented, "The fun thing about doing the candy canes was that we didn't have to go to our classes that day."

What Is a Friend?

What is a Friend? I'll tell you.

It is a person with whom you dare be yourself.

Your soul can go naked with him.

He seeks to ask you to put on nothing, only to be what you really are.

When you are with him, you do not have to be on your guard.

You can say what you think, so long as it is genuinely you.

He understands those contradictions in your nature that cause others to mis-judge you.

With him you breathe freely — you can avow your little vanities and envies and absurdities and in opening them up to him they are dissolved on the white ocean of his loyalty.

He understands. — You can weep with him, laugh with him, pray with him — through and underneath it all he sees, knows and loves you.

A Friend, I repeat, is one with whom you dare to be yourself.

The Icing On The Cake

What was a friend? A friend was one who liked you no matter how dumb you acted. A friend was one who listened to your thoughts, opinions, and even complaints. Most of all, a friend cared.

Friendships included those with peers, with family, with boyfriends/girlfriends, and with teachers. Each was unique and special.

Friendship with peers allowed for sharing interests with people of the same age. Problems with school, other friends, parents, and growing up were easier to understand. Often, a student looked forward to coming to school just to see friends. "My friends were important because they were there when needed a shoulder to cry on. They cheered me up," stated junior Sarah Thomasson.

Friendships with family members often became strained in high school. But, strong friendships in the home endured the tough times and grew.

Boyfriends and girlfriends were a large part of some students' lives. To some people, having a boyfriend or girlfriend was a step toward growing up. Enjoying each other's company led to a good friendship with one's boyfriend or girl-friend and probably kept them together.

Students tried to deny and avoid it, but students and teachers could become close friends. Teachers were older and more experienced. They, therefore, could understand students' problems and offer a different point of view. Friendships often aided a student in learning and life.

Friends were a part of life. They helped us get through the bad days and they reinforced with us on the good days. Without friends, life would be very lonely and bleak.

"Friends care about you and are there when you're down."

One main concern of P.E. instructors was to change students' bad attitude toward P.E. "Some teachers drilled the class like an army and made it seem as though the class was all hard work," stated boys' P.E. instructor Mr. Ron Hebert. Sue White, girls' P.E. instructor agreed that students had the wrong idea about P.E. It seemed as though students' attitudes were changing. More students were enrolled in classes and saw P.E. as fun and enjoyable. No longer did they think of it as a free period or as a way to get an easy A. Instead students saw P.E. as a way to improve their physical condition.

There were other things that the instructors tried to change. "Besides the weight room, I would like to change the curriculum. For example, girls' P.E. 1 is no different than girls' P.E. 2. We are also trying to set up a new aerobics program so that the girls can work more on body toning and therefore improve their own personal pride," commented Mrs. White. Mr. Hebert also had some changes in mind. "I plan to expand the weight room and I would like to give recognition to those students who break previous school records," explained Mr. Hebert.

The Physical Education program was among the many areas that had undergone definite changes.

Class Competition Soars During Homecoming

As Mr. Reznas let loose of the rope, screams rang throughout the campus. Juniors frantically encouraged their team to get back up on their feet and pull the sophomores across the line. In desperation, the juniors put forth all their muscle and led their class to a noontime victory.

Homecoming Week was filled with many activities and enthusiasm. Each day we dressed up differently: hat and shades, 50's, futes, and maroon and silver day. Freshman

Raul Lopez commented, "Homecoming was a different experience, and I had a good time participating."

Another Homecoming Week event was the powder-puff football game. Towards the end of the game, the crowd was on edge as time on the clock was running out and the senior/freshman team had the ball. To their disappointment, they ended up a few yards short and the junior/sophomore team won 14 to 0.

The theme for the week was 20th Century Bruins. Long hours were spent folding napkins into flowers, painting, making letters, and placing the finished flowers on the float. This became very monotonous but everyone was aware that their hard work would pay off. On Friday the completed floats appeared in the annual Homecoming Parade.

During

football game, anxious students awaited the final announcement of who would win the Spirit Bear. Mr. Peasley announced, "...and the champions of the 1986-87 Homecoming Spirit Week are...the juniors!"

Eddie Dias, freshman, said, "I wanted one certain person to win, but still, I didn't want the other girls to lose." As Mr. Hoyt announced that Nancy Sahagun had won the Homecoming crown for 1986, the crowd stood up and applauded.

Homecoming Queen Nancy was very actively involved during her high school career. She was in student government, was a cheerleader, kept statistics for baseball, and served on School Site Council.

The students had already found out the preceding Wednesday night that Darin Ball had been chosen King by the powderpuff teams. The other candidates were Jose Lopez, Joey Everett, Ambrosio Rodriguez, and Guillermo Manriquez.

Darin was also a very involved student. He had participated in track, football, Student Body Government, School Site Council, and he was Student Body President.

New Way? No Way!

A Bruin Resolution, the theme of the week, failed its purpose to unify the student body. Lack of organization and rain kept noontime activities from taking place which contributed to low student involvement and spirit.

Another reason the spirit was low was the students didn't feel motivated enough to dress. "Since the classes weren't competing, it wasn't fun to dress up," said junior Jose Perez.

The participation was also low due to lack of publicity.

Few students about the dress up days which included Switch Day, Printed T-Shirt Day and Mourning Day. But nobody forgot Maroon and Silver Day.

Friday's rally showed the low spirit. Many students didn't attend and the majority of those who did attend were rude and uninvolved in the activities. As a result, Mr. Peasley lectured the inconsiderate crowd. From that point on, the rally went smoothly as the cheerleaders presented a humorous skit.

At the rally,

"Spirit and participation throughout the week wasn't all that great."

Phil Briones was then crowned king by Mr. Peasley.

Anxiously, the crowd at Friday night's basketball game waited for Mr. Rezinias to reveal the Winter Spirit Queen, Robyn Wade. The crowd cheered as she was crowned.

Although Winter Spirit Week wasn't spirited, the high spirit at the game led to a victory against the Ripon Christian Knights.

Strained muscles, bruises, broken bones, and injured egos were a part of any sport. So, why did students make the effort to play football, volleyball, soccer, cross country, basketball, wrestling, track, tennis, baseball, or softball?

Sports taught students to work together to accomplish a single goal. Sports also allowed students to accomplish many personal goals such as playing a sport they had always watched others play and competing against students from other schools. Junior Mark Dunn stated, "I played sports for the challenge of reaching higher goals."

The most important thing sports did for the students was make them part of a team. Greg Garrett, sophomore, stated, "Playing sports was like being a part of a generous and supportive family."

Students discovered that to participate in sports, they had to endure injuries and pressures that often seemed unbearable. Yet, students learned, built strength, and found satisfaction in working together to overcome these obstacles.

"...Go Bruins, go, go," yelled the J.V. cheerleaders as they tried to raise the spirit of the football crowd. "I didn't feel the crowd had much spirit during football," said sophomore Lorna Higgins. With such a bad season, it was hard for the J.V. cheerleaders to keep up the spirits of the crowd.

Basketball season was a different story. The J.V. cheerleaders looked forward to each game. The crowd was more spirited and a lot more of the community came. It was easier for the J.V. cheerleaders to get the crowd excited.

Cheerleading wasn't just fun and games. The cheerleaders had to practice and keep their grades up, too. Practices were every other day and they lasted for two hours or more. Some J.V. cheerleaders stayed longer to make posters. Then they would go home and have to do homework.

Overall, the J.V. cheerleaders had an exciting year, from summer camp to surprising the football team at shang-hi.

Rough Beginning Leads To

Smooth Ending

Wow! Being on the Varsity Cheerleading squad was something the girls had looked forward to since cheerleading try-outs. They figured cheerleading was fun and games, but they had a big surprise. They worked hard and spent a lot of time going to the games, planning rallies, and staying after school to make signs and posters.

They had some misunderstandings and miscommunication. One of their biggest conflicts was ordering their uniforms. Half the squad wanted one kind of uniform and the others wanted a different style.

Another problem was showing up for practice. To solve this problem, new cheerleader advisor Alana Bonuccelli assigned practice time and places. It worked out for a while, but soon a few of the girls began to resent having an advisor tell them what to do. These girls had never had an advisor to go to with their problems and were used to doing things on their own. Things worked out, however, and the rest of the year went smoothly.

The cheerleaders had good times together. Cheerleading camp brought them closer because they spent so much time together working, learning, and teaching each other cheers.

Season Doesn't Live Up To High Hopes

"I thought we would end on a winning note, 6-3, 5-4, or something like that," stated varsity coach Ron Hebert. The winning note stopped short with a 2-7 record for the Bruin football Coach Hebert, along with the rest of the team, felt that the Riverbank News was unfair to the team, and that the comments should have been for the J.V. and Freshmen football squads. "Any reporter who has the audacity to write a negative story about his own home team should either move or print recipes," stated a very irritated senior Darin Ball.

The highlight of the season was when it came to an end and the team felt good about themselves and what they had accomplished. Even though the Bruins didn't have a winning season, and had to battle for every yard they gained, "the boys felt like winners, which is something they had never felt before," expressed a very satisfied Coach Hebert.

"The highlight of the season was when we won the first couple of games. I thought we'd do better," said Gene Sandoval.

Sportsmanship Questioned

Throughout the year when the freshmen and J.V. teams were mentioned, the words "poor sportsmanship" usually followed. There were countless fights and personal foul violations which reflected on their win-loss records. The J.V. team finished 2-7 and the freshmen team 1-6-1.

On November 12, 1986, the Riverbank News printed several criticisms of the teams' behavior and attitude, emphasizing the teams' poor sportsmanship.

In a letter to the Riverbank News, Coach Karl Vargas stated that though there was always room for improvement, the teams attended practice daily and had high goals. Sophomore Joaquin Santos said, "Name calling and cursing happened on the sidelines but it would have been better if the reporter talked to the coach instead of putting it in the newspaper."

Though the scoreboard often showed embarrassing results, playing hard until the end was the teams' ultimate achievement. "With hard work on everyone's part, they came out as winners, whether we won or lost," said Coach Vargas.

Winning Tradition Continues

Cross Country continued its winning tradition by again taking the T.V.L. title. They were league champions, for ten of the last eleven years. Coach Bruce Edwards said, "I thought the team was very successful considering the injuries." Six out of the eight varsity runners were out at some time because of injuries.

Brian Pollard was voted most valuable runner. He was undefeated in league meets. Most improved was awarded to David Terra, and the most inspirational runner was Michael Dean. These three along with Cesar Garcia, Jose Lopez, Dominic Callandriello, Carl Tigner, and Carl Araris made up the 1986-87 Varsity Cross Country Team. The freshman team consisted of Peter Dean, Dan Garcia, and Carl Tigner.

"It was hard work, it was lots of fun, and I had a great year. The reason for my success was that I had a lot of support from the team," said senior David Terra.

Senior David Terra tries to keep his stamina alive throughout the long race.

Although the team remained undefeated in the T.V.L., they had to train harder next year so they could perhaps do better sections.

Everyday the team ran five miles in the morning and 10 miles out in the afternoon. By the end of the year, the varsity team was averaging about sixty miles of running per week.

"Because we tried harder than most teams, we ended up being competitive, even though many of our runners had no previous running background," said Coach Edwards.

Winning Season Shadowed By Tragedy

Destined for victory, the varsity soccer team worked hard to make it to the sub-sections. However, two days before the team's play-off game, the team and the school were shocked to hear of the fatal car accident which took the life of Coach Olsen, coach and friend to both the team and the rest of the student body.

Wearing black armbands in honor of Coach Olsen, the team battled St. Patrick's in the playoffs, losing 1-2 in the final minutes of play.

"The team had to pull together and deal with their grief, and they did a great job of getting organized," said athletic director Denny Carl who helped fill the void by coaching their final game.

"I think that the emotional impact of Coach Olsen's death on the team was the main cause of our losing the first game of the sub-sections," stated junior Mark Dunn.

The most inspirational player was Mark Dunn while Kory Gilbert was named the most improved player. The most valuable player award went to Joel Tavizon. Mark

Record Poor Reflection Of Team Effort

"The 0-12 record did not reflect the maximum effort put into the sport," added White. "I think that was the main reason for the poor record. "I believe it had been so long since the team had won a match (3 years) that as soon they made a small mistake, they fell apart. They felt defeated before they were even close to losing," commented White.

It was tough work keeping up team morale, but players like Chris Basulto and Twyla White helped keep the team's spirits high. "When the team would get down after a difficult loss, we'd tell Chris and Twyla would start

Disappointing Season For Volleyball

It was 5:00 a.m., J.V. Volleyball practice had just begun and was not to end until 7:00 a.m. Coach Cia Olivera stated, "I was on call to Gallo's. When they called me in, I would hold practice at 5:00 a.m." Considering 7:00 a.m. was when most people woke up, it was amazing that the players made it to practice. Many of them, however, did not make it through the season.

Sports were time consuming. Every player who went out for a sport knew they had to be willing to put in extra time to have had a winning team. The J.V. Volleyball team started their day early and it did not end until after midnight because of a game or homework. Was that too much to ask? Brady Buckingham, freshman, stated, "I didn't have enough time at night or in the morning for my homework. My grades fell. So, I chose my grades over volleyball and quit the team."

Only a few players quit the team because of the time it consumed. Others quit for no particular reason. There were fourteen players at the beginning of the season, and the team dwindled to eight. Carrie Long stated, "It was harder on the players who stayed. We tired more easily because there wasn't anyone to replace us."

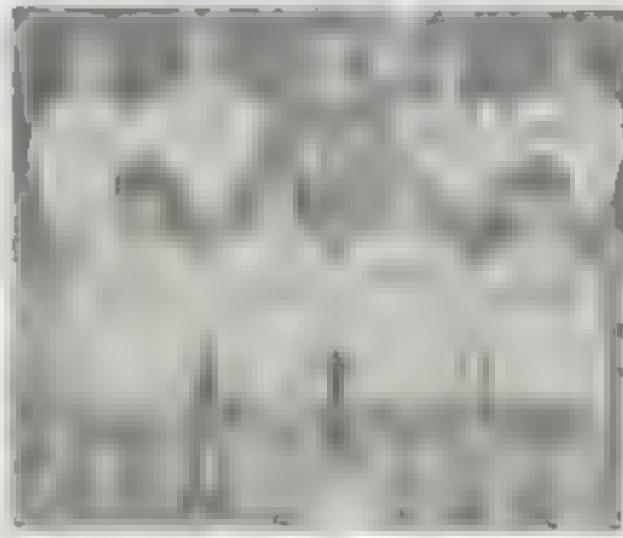

There were many hardships and it showed, as the J.V. Volleyball team won only three games.

Team Has What It Takes

"Ouch! I broke a nail," not something you heard on the court when the J.V. Girls Basketball team played. They did not worry if their makeup matched their uniforms or if their hair got messed up dribbling the ball down court for two points. Instead, they learned plays and concentrated on the game. The players gave of themselves as athletes to have a winning team.

The basketball team was like a family. As a family they took the bad with the good, the losses with the wins. They came to the point where they new one another's strengths and weaknesses. According to Coach Cia Olivera, "They worked as a team during practice, and when they played as a team during a game, they did well.

Community and school support were two things the J.V. Girls Basketball team did not have. The stands were never full and the team considered themselves lucky if a handful of spectators showed up to support them. According to stat keeper Shelly Brown, "The team did not have a lot of support, but when someone was there to cheer them on, they played better."

The J.V. Girls Basketball team put all of their efforts together to achieve a goal--to build a stronger and more experienced team. The team worked all season to accomplish their goals.

season came when the team won and everybody gave 100% of themselves and played as a team. As the season went on, the team improved in every area, especially working as an unit.

Because the Bruins had only eight players, it was very difficult for both the coach and the players to perform to the best of their ability. Fewer substitutes meant the team had to work harder and stay on the court longer. Having to work harder showed that the Lady Bruins were just that much more determined to make the season a learning experience as well as a fun and enjoyable one.

So Close And Yet So Far

With only one second left on the clock and the crowd going wild, the score was 65-67. If the Bruins beat the Huskies, they would qualify for the playoffs. Desperately junior Lance Lindsey shot for the two points that would lead to overtime and the hoped for much needed victory. The crowd held their breath as the ball hit the rim, bounced twice, went round and round, then dropped to the floor as the Bruins realized they could finish fourth in the league. This seemed to describe the whole season.

It began well. They won the games, but as soon as they lost that first game, everything went wrong. Maybe the personal expectations were too high and overcame the unity of team members. Coach Carl knew the team's potential and felt the need to bring the team together.

He held a critique session for the players to evaluate their performance on the court and how they could improve to play as one team, Bernal, junior.

"Practice makes perfect" was an old, but logical saying that applied to the sophomore basketball team. Their past two seasons, the team put in a massive amount of practices that made major improvements.

"There was no one incident that stood out over the course of the season because every movement was exciting with the constant improvement," stated Coach Jerry Lindsey. Even though the pre-season started out with few wins, the league ended with more victories than losses.

The losses were usually close, frustrating games, lost by very few points. "Though we wanted to win badly and tried our best, we seemed to make dumb mistakes which made us loose by one or two baskets," commented sophomore Ray Baca.

The team also had to deal with the top opposing, Hughson. The team was difficult to beat "...because they had a solid nucleus and worked well together," commented Coach Lindsey.

Though they had two years of building, the sophomore team still needed to work together better as a team.

Trapped in the corner by the Oakdale defense, freshman Frank Hernandez attempts to find an open teammate and get a pass to him.

Starting From Scratch

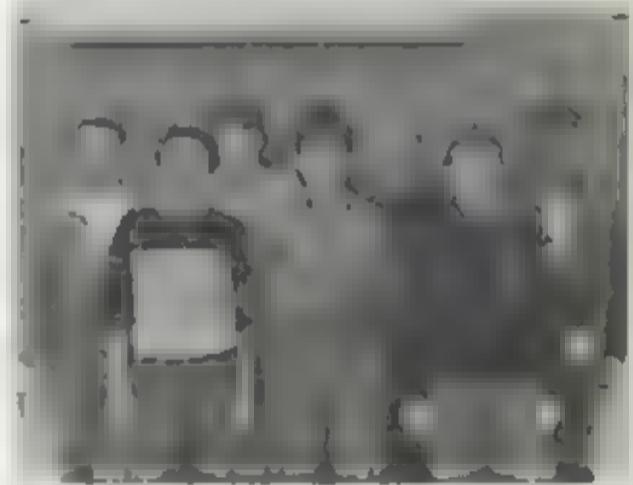

The typical freshman was known for being nerdy, small, and very uncoordinated. Although the team was not uncoordinated or nerdy, they were small. "My first impression was one of disappointment concerning the team's physical size and the lack of desire the players possessed," commented Coach Greg Southern. But there was a different attitude from freshman Raul Mendez, "I loved playing basketball because it's fun and I played most my life."

Being physically small was a big disadvantage, but the team's toughest opponents were themselves. "Our own lack of experience manifested itself in our shooting percentage," stated Coach Southern.

Throughout the difficult season, the team had to face not having much of a crowd cheering for them. In junior high, they had support and plenty of publicity, but now they had to start at the bottom.

The season was a difficult one ending with a record of six and fourteen. Though the standings of the season were not very high, the last game, a victory against Hughson, brought hope for the next season.

Takedown To Victory

Although physical strength was important to wrestling, it was clear thinking and knowing the moves that often decided a match. Wrestling was a thinking and technique sport in which experience was the key. Because the youth wrestling league was still fairly small, it was rare to find experienced wrestlers. Most boys learned to wrestle in high school.

The team tried to learn technique while still working on strength, speed, coordination, and balance. They were successful, for R.H.S. was a strong contender in all the tournaments they attended. The team placed sixth out of twenty schools at the Dos Palos Tournament and took third at Mariposa. That victory won the team their first trophy since 1978. The team's vast improvement was shown when they moved from last place in the

Getting A Hold On A New Interest

The score was tied and there was one minute left in the third period. Cautiously, the wrestler let his opponent up from the referee's position, allowing him to lead the score with a one point advantage. From here on out the championship would be determined by who received takedown points. Each wrestler struggled desperately to dominate the other. In one last attempt, the Riverbank wrestler shot a double leg takedown and made it possible for the team to take second place in the T.V.L. tournament.

The responsibility and self-discipline that so many individuals lacked was essential for a wrestler. The members of the team were required to make weight at both dual meets and tournaments. Wrestlers spent their time abstaining from eating too much to maintain perfect weight. Practices were always very strenuous and were geared to introduce new moves and improve techniques.

During Coach Lee Ehrler's second year of coaching at R.H.S., the team improved quite drastically. They putted themselves up from being a last place team to ranking second in the league. "Our J.V. team was extremely small and many times those individuals would be moved up to fill in for varsity members who were injured. They did exceptionally well and we are looking forward to being even more successful next year," replied Coach Ehrler.

New Players Learn Fundamentals

The heat of the sun beat down upon the faces of the two worn out players. Slowly the arm of the R.H.S. participant rose above her head to make an overhead smash. The score was 15-love with both players determined to win.

Determination was essential to become a good tennis player. Also needed was mental strength to overcome loss of concentration and physical talent to serve the perfect ace or make the perfect return. In order to obtain these skills, practices were held everyday at the Riverbank tennis courts from 3:30 until 5:30. "Our tennis practices were hard and strenuous, but they helped us to improve our techniques and strategies," commented junior Donald Rose.

Torn nets and damaged asphalt at R.H.S. caused the team to practice elsewhere and was a major problem during the season. Plans to repair the courts were made, but no action had taken place. This made it difficult for the players who didn't have transportation to get to practice and for other schools to locate where the matches were being held.

The tennis team was under the supervision of the new coach, Bill Beyers. "Coaching tennis has given me the opportunity to do what I really enjoy and help perfect the skills of younger players," said Coach Bill Beyers. Both the coach and the team members expected an overall successful season.

Tennis Anyone? Not At R.H.S.

"Deuce...Advantage Ripon. Deuce...Advantage Riverbank. Game, set, and match to Riverbank."

This phrase was often heard at matches. The only pitfall was that few people heard, because not many attended tennis matches. Parents were usually the only real fans the team had, but sometimes parents couldn't get off work to see the early afternoon matches.

"My personal goal for the year was to defeat Mary Kay Yarbrough from Ripon," confessed senior Deeanna Moyle, the only varsity returnee.

Four girls and four boys were needed to complete the varsity team. They competed in three different kinds of matches: singles, doubles, and mixed doubles. Getting the four boys wasn't a problem, but finding the fourth player for the girls team was difficult.

Another setback for Riverbank was the lack of up-keep on the city courts, where all the matches were held. The team discovered that the ownership of the courts had changed hands from the city to the Riverbank Elementary School District. Therefore, negotiations between the two school districts commenced as to who would take responsibility for the expenses to repair the courts.

"I would like to help each individual player to develop his/her game and become a better player," explained new tennis coach Bill Beyer. "So far though, we're still in the beginning stages."

Varsity Track

Distance runners, freshman Saul Alanis, senior Bryon Pollard, freshman Peter Dean, and assistant coach Jeep Olivera keep the pace while practicing for their long distance competitions.

"Up, up, and away," exclaims freshman Gustavo Avalos as he leaps over the padded hurdle during track warm ups.

Preparing for the big meet between R.H.S. and Hughson High, freshmen Juan Garcia and Shane Sinclair stretch their upper leg muscles.

Junior Manuel Bernal struggles to beat his last mark in shotputting.

New Start On Fast Track

Sticks and stones may break bones, but not on the R.H.S. track. The track team finally was able to hold home meets because the rocks, weeds, and holes in the track were repaired and a new drainage system was installed. "Practicing on the actual track instead of the road, gave our team a privilege that other teams had already experienced," stated sophomore Bill Chapin.

The track team consisted of many champions. Coach Bruce Edwards had coached the victorious T.V.L. Champion Cross Country team. With the coach came Bryon Pollard, Bill Chapin, Cesar Garcia, and Michael Dean, cross country runners; Darin Bait, top T.V.L. running back; and Jesse Frost, wrestling sec-

Stretching For Success

physical health and fitness" were the reasons Coach Edwards and Coach Denny Carl enjoyed coaching the Bruins.

Each coach added to the team with specialization. Coach Edwards prepared the distance runners and the pole vaulters. Coach Carl instructed the team in hurdles and the long, high, and triple jumps. Coach Hebert worked with the shot put and discuss throwers and taught the team weight training.

Dedication and determination were the greatest strengths of the team. Victory wasn't always signified by winning, but also by effort and continuous improvement.

"I enjoyed track because I could help the team," said freshman Dominic Callandrillo.

Junior Dominic Callandrillo shows great speed while running.

"I wish we could have had more athletes try out for the J.V. team," stated Coach Bruce Edwards. Even though there was a lack of athletes, the team did not give up.

Dedication Creates Winners

"Ahhhhhhhhh, spring at last! It's time to jump into those shorts and hit the field for another spectacular year of softball."

As the seasons changed, these very words were in the minds of the dedicated girls who played varsity softball. These girls weren't ordinary females, but Bruins, and with that title came much hard work.

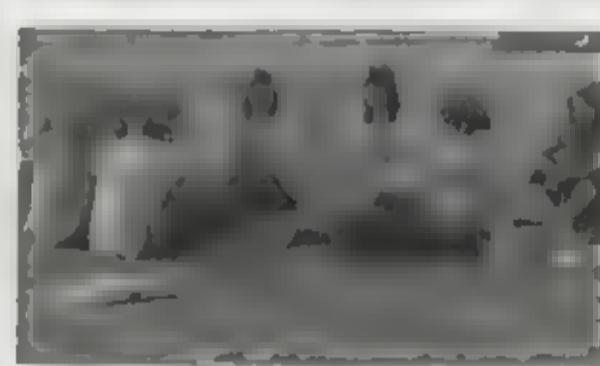

Determination was crucial for having a successful season. These Lady Bruins went through hours of rigorous training every weekday in the hot sun or the cramped gym if it rained. They spent their time running and drilling to improve basic softball skills. "We were strong in the infield, but our outfield was new, so that's where most of the work went," said Coach Sue White.

Coach White had only three returning starters to train a new squad.

Some members of the team started practicing in mid-January, throwing whenever the weather permitted and even when it didn't.

This dedication was the key to a season that showed promise for success. "I knew the team would do well because we worked so hard," senior Anna Pedroso said.

With a vicious grunt, senior Michelle Perez fires the ball for yet another strike.

"Batter up!" Approaching the plate was sophomore Monica Perez. It was bottom of the ninth, two outs, and the score was tied. The crowd grew silent. After Monica swung her second strike, the pressure was on. She swung the bat at the next pitch. BAM! The ball went out of the ballpark. Monica had led the team to another exciting victory.

Winning wasn't all the J.V. softball team did. They also had hard losses, and rough days of practices, to make up for those losses.

Coach Pete Martinez felt that every game was a challenge and none of them were taken lightly by the team.

The most exciting part about being a coach was "sharing the feeling of winning and the knowledge I had of the game."

Playing softball wasn't always "just another sport" It was a way of making friends, working together as a team, building up their coordination, and making the team a second family.

Even though the team had grown to share and care for each other, Coach Martinez didn't think the J.V. softball team would end the season with more than 12 girls. Coach Martinez was afraid the girls would give up on themselves and quit the team.

Closely watching the pitcher, sophomore Javier Castillo waits for the perfect pitch.

Getting Off To A Slow Start

The crowd sat in silence as a Bruin player stepped up to homeplate. The bases were loaded. The team held their breath, waiting, hoping that the hitter would score the winning run.

So went the J.V. season at R.H.S. They had several hours of practice each day. Monty Avila, the J.V. coach, worked the team really hard from the beginning and continued to do so throughout the season.

"We had six returning players, five of whom started 80% of the time, so they were familiar with our system," stated Coach Avila.

"We started the season off slowly. If we had paid more attention to what we were doing and played more as a team, we probably would have improved even more," commented freshman Raymond Trujillo.

The team's strengths were their strong pitching staff and the overall balance in the line-up. Their weakness, on the other hand, was their depth. Players coming off the bench had talent, but there were only fourteen players.

"Teaching young players how to play the game and how to win was the most exciting part about coaching. After they've accomplished that, seeing them win was satisfying," said Coach Avila.

"Hey, George! It's so hot out here, isn't it? At least they've got two outs, but what's the batter's count?

"I think it's full count. He's only got one more strike...hey, here comes a fly-ball, I got, I got, I got it! Whoa..."

"Nice slide, George. Don't worry about the mud, it'll wash off."

The baseball season started out as usual, raining. The field often became wet and so muddy "...that players were not able to practice, which usually affected how they played, especially their hitting," stated Coach Wes Remmers.

But soon sunny days came and the players improved. The team only had five returning players and Fun people?

Representing the junior class, Manuel Bernal wins the pie eating contest during Homecoming Week.

Teachers plus administration plus students equaled people. That was the equation that made Riverbank High come alive.

Much of the staff at R.H.S. had been here since time began. They knew what was going on with the students, what had gone on, and by past experience, what would go on. Veteran teacher Mr. Wayne Montgomery stated that people were special at R.H.S. "because they really care."

Something else that made people special at R.H.S. "was the togetherness. Everyone here was like a big family. Friends knew each other's every move before they made it," commented sophomore Sam Perez.

The interaction among the students and the staff at R.H.S. was a tremendous bond. Teachers were dedicated, patient and hard working. When asked about all the extra hours the teachers put into such activities as sports, speech, drama, band, and yearbook, Ms. Sandra Barnes gritted her teeth and replied, "Dedication."

Because we came in all different shapes, sizes and forms, our world was unique.

Seniors Afflicted By Age Old Disease

Senioritis: An attitude characterized by excessive truancy in school, but perfect attendance at football games and parties.

Most seniors who suffered from senioritis decided that learning was over; it was time for fun. Having to go through the same routine and seeing the same faces for the fourth year was part of the cause.

Symptoms started to show up at the end of the junior year when a few students changed from the harder classes to the easier ones. This spread during the year to the everyday occurrence of a dozen extra trips to the bathroom.

Not all seniors caught senioritis. The college prep students would not let themselves be tempted by this fast spreading attitude. Although they were sometimes envious of their classmates' carefree attitude, they knew they couldn't goof off. Deanna Moyle said, "College bound students see senioritis and wish we could catch it, but we realize that there is life after high school."

Tired and haggard, Eunice Ortegon is a perfect example of senioritis.

Seniors Get Serious

Secretary Robyn Wade, President Traci Ramos, Activities Chairperson Julie Larson, Vice-President Michelle Perez, Not Pictured Treasurer Lupe Abarca

It had finally happened! The freshman class of 1984 was finally the senior class of 1987.

While most students were enjoying their senior year by going up and down the halls yelling, "Let's have a senior revolt," and throwing freshmen in trash cans, President Traci Ramos, Vice President Michelle Perez, Secretary Robyn Wade, Treasurer Lupe Abarca, and Activities Representative Julie Larson had to become serious about what was going on around them.

They were busy raising money for Disneyland by working on the Cheese and Wine. They also had to organize their Homecoming float, get their graduation together by ordering caps and gowns, order senior announcements, prepare the baccalaureate, and set up the graduation itself.

These things took a lot of time and effort. Luckily, at student council meetings "...there were no conflicts between the officers and the representatives of the senior class," said Julie Larson.

Outstanding Seniors Honored

Throughout the years, these students achieved top honors for their dedication and hard work.

Julie Larson and David Barron both excelled in school and received top honors and active cheerleader and a drum major in high grades even when everyone else was behind.

Eunice Ortegon could put dreams onto the paper. When she got inspired she can draw forever. Rudy Vargas also had the talent of making a white canvas come to life.

To see any of the latest trends from suspenders to long, tight skirts, we just looked for Susan Valencia or Ambrosio.

Deeanna Moyle was an active cheerleader and a drum major for two years. Chris Limper seemed like an unlikely person for most spirited, but Both Darin Ball and Traci Ramos were extremely involved in school and extracurricular activities such as yearbook, leadership, sports, and student government.

Carlos Castillo and Patty Vargas could take a normal situation and make it hilarious. They both could make a sour mood turn happy.

If you watched sports, you must have watched either Troy Brady or Michel Perez. Troy was voted all tourney for basketball. Michelle was M.V.P. in softball.

Both Terry Morris and Kristi Reeves were good friends to have. They got along with everyone and could cheer us up.

Senior Year Isn't Free

"Mom, I need $30 for the Disneyland payment."

"Dad, can I borrow $20 for the game and dance tonight?"

"Mom, the SAT costs $11.50, do you have the money now?"

It seemed every time they turned around, seniors were asking for money for something. Seniors needed money for the fun things such as Disneyland, Homecoming and Winter Sports Queen Candidates dresses, the Junior/Senior Prom and graduation gifts.

The necessary things that had to be paid for were graduation announcements, senior pictures, the SAT, the Achievement test, caps and gowns, Grad Night clothes and graduation clothes, and applying for college cost at least $35.

The average senior year costs anywhere from $500 to $1000. Little things that added up were lunches, games, dances, dates, etc. Seniors needed to have a job or have an allowance to help pay for all of the expenses that came along.

All the money that seniors spent either came from their parents or they worked after school and weekends. Most of the time the parents paid for the necessary things but the fun stuff they had to for themselves. Every month it seemed that they had 500 different things to pay for. Luckily none of the seniors were forced to rob Fort Knox but as prices went up they thought about it.

Prices were going up for everything. Vince Panero stated, "I am trying to be as conservative as possible this whole year. I don't want to be broke after high school."

Two Of A Kind

Melanie Wheeler laughs hysterically at her own joke.

"...born with one or as a pair at birth" was the dictionary's definition of twin. Many people fantasized about having a twin for such different reasons as tricking people, sharing clothes, or being part of that special bond twins share.

One set of twins who attended R.H.S. were juniors Melanie and Michelle Wheeler. "Even though they looked almost identical, they both had very distinct personalities," said Brady Buckingham.

There were many advantages to having a twin besides looking alike. Michelle Wheeler liked being a twin because "...if you're at a new school, it's easier to hang around with someone."

Melanie, on the other hand, said, "I can talk about things easier with Michelle than with my other sisters."

"Hey, Melanie! Or is that Michelle?" was a phrase that was familiarly heard across campus. Sometimes though, they took advantage of the situation as they switched personalities to confuse parents and peers. However, they were not successful with their parents who knew their personalities so well.

They were the second set of twins in their family. The other was their great aunts. They are the youngest of four sisters—Tracey, 19; Kelly, 17; Mary, 26; and Renia; 24.

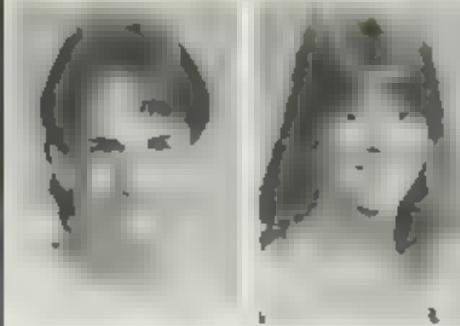

When it came down to it, Melanie and Michelle both agreed that the best thing about having a twin was the close relationship between them.

If I Only Had A Million Dollars

Rachel Kerr and Lewis Compton fantasize about the life of the rich.

Fantasizing is a big part of a person's everyday life. Millions of people hoped to win the lottery and debated on the numerous ways they would spend the money.

What would you do if you won $1,000,000? "I would buy Tom Selleck!" exclaimed Rachel Kerr.

There was also a more serious side to the responses. Jason Remmers said he would "...make a large pond and fill it with bass, wild ducks, and geese."

On the other hand, Chris Basulto would "...first, pay my way through college. Then I would go to all the fabulous countries I've read about. I would save some for the future, but basically I'd live it up with the rest."

Lisa Callandilla sympathetically stated she would, "...give half of it to organizations who truly need it like aids research, leukemia, etc. With the other half I would ask a friend who has always been there for me to travel the world with me--the first place we would go is Paris!"

Finally, Jesse Velasco said, "I would help the poor people in our town and give some of the money to our school, so that each person in this school would get a good education."

We've all wished upon a star to win the lottery or simply inherit money from a long lost relative.

Teamwork Leads To Accomplishment

Our junior year was a year of looking forward. To some of us it was looking forward to our senior year, graduating, college, graduating again, and surviving in "the big world." To others it was looking forward to finally being eligible to take the G.E.D. test.

Junior class officers Marvane Wright, president, Donald Rose, vice-president, David Wilson, secretary, Manos Zacharias, treasurer, and Shelley Choate, activities chairperson were able to unify these opposing views and get the junior class to work together to accomplish things that otherwise would not have been possible.

Marvane Wright stated she ran for president because "...I wanted to make sure things would get done and I wanted to organize them. This way I knew things would be accomplished."

The Wine and Cheese Festival, for example, was a big accomplishment for the juniors. The officers had to order the food and arrange for the booth. They were successful in making $700 as they sold cotton candy, corndogs, and soft drinks.

The officers also organized the prom committee and spent much time and preparation on the prom. They had to decide where it would be held, when it would begin, and what refreshments would be served.

And last but definitely not least, the juniors placed first during spirit week as they ran away with the spirit bear. This wouldn't have been possible without organization from the officers.

Sophomores Dream Of Traveling The World

As the globes turned and the maps were pulled down, sophomore geography students thought about places they wanted to go and the cultures they wanted to visit throughout the world.

Fifteen percent of the sophomore class thought that Hawaii would be the hip place to go. Anne Magallion stated, "Hawaii would have been something different and from the pictures I saw the water and climate looked great."

But from another point of view Dana Zervos felt that seeing the whole world would be great because "...I would like to see and enjoy the different people and activities from the different cultures."

But what's so great about the foreign countries and far away places? Karen Shaffer did not see anything special. The place she wanted to go was the town of Turlock because "...of my friends, family, and past ties. I grew up there and miss it."

All in all everybody agreed that R.H.S. was the place to be, but they just needed a change of environment once in a while.

Geography scholars Rene Rodriguez and Angela Talbert are fascinated by their favorite vacation spots.

From Rags To Riches: Hard Work Pays Off

What did it take to bring the sophomore class from a bank balance of $0.93 to $1,010.61 in two months? It took a sophomore class officer team led by president Helio Brasil. They raised the money at the Wine and Cheese which brought in $750.00. They also organized a class drawing which brought in $563.00. They also had many car washes and they sold Bruin key chains.

But Helio was not alone in his desire to help his class. He had help from vice president Kristie Shannon, secretary Carrie Whorton, treasurer Brian Taylor, and activity chairperson Lorna Higgins.

Helio explained, "I ran for president because I felt that there was a lack of enthusiasm in the class and I wanted to help the financial status." With Helio's help in organizing and his dedication these things became a reality.

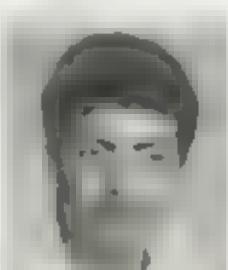

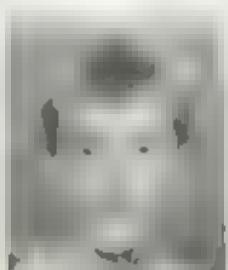

Carrie Whorton played a major role in helping plan the fundraisers. "I got all the supplies and organized things like getting our spot at the Wine & Cheese. It was also my idea to order the Bruin key chains," said Carrie.

Teamwork was the key word for the sophomore class. Together they helped each other out and put the class of 89 in the money.

Chris Perez Helps Teacher, Students

Getting up early for two weeks straight was not unusual for Chris Perez. For two weeks out of the last two summers, Chris Perez worked assisting R.H.S. art teacher Mr. Warren Gray prepare for the coming school year. During those two weeks, Chris helped Mr. Gray by sanding tables, cleaning the room, moving boxes, and arranging furniture.

Chris commented, "It wasn't like a normal job. It was easier because I knew Mr. Gray, and I knew my job was helping other students."

Mr. Gray said, "Chris was a good worker and I would hire him again."

How would you like to work for a teacher? Do you think getting up at six o'clock in the morning and going to school to help a teacher prepare for school would be fun? If so, then join the new trend at R.H.S., and ask one of your teachers if they would like some cheap summer help.

Art teacher Mr. Warren Gray instructs sophomore Chris Perez where to put the canvas.

Chaotic First Day Befuddles Freshmen

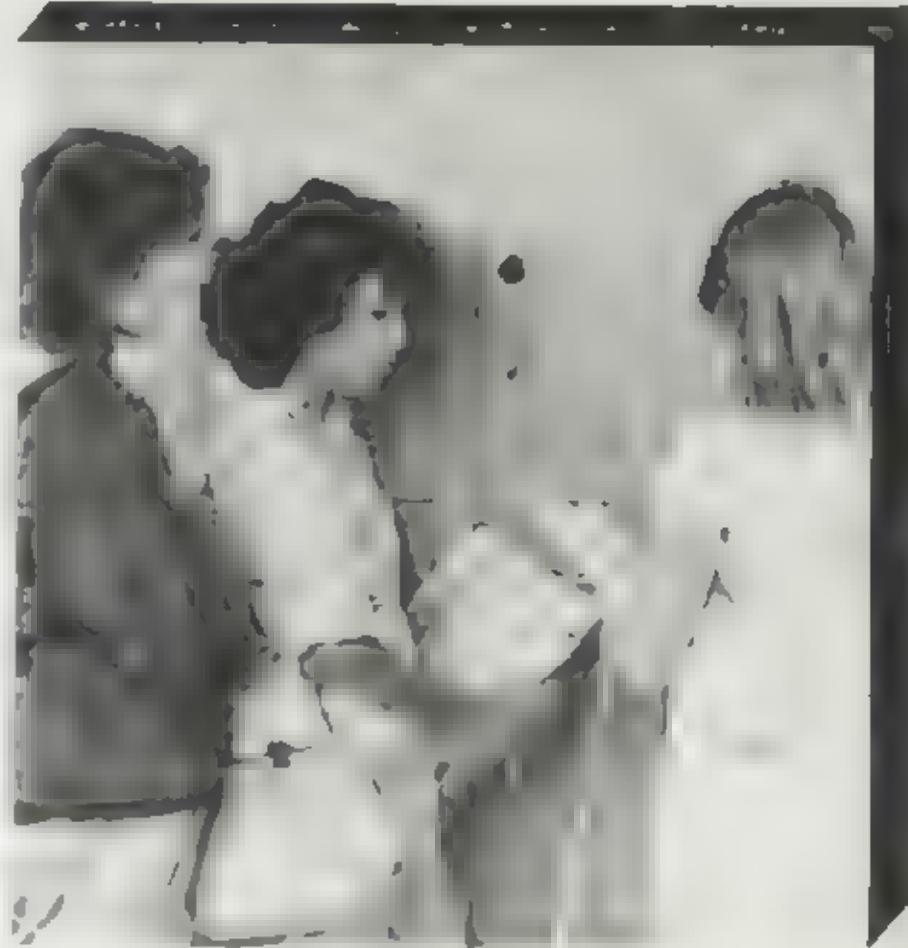

Your first day of high school. You were half excited and half scared. You came to school and panicked. You saw a friend and yelled, "Wait, help me, please! I'm lost. Please help me!"

As you babbled on, your friend took you to the office to find out where your classes were. Finding all seven classrooms was your next challenge. You searched for your classes and found one of them right before the bell rang. Kim Cobb said, "I had a friend show me where to go."

Next you found your locker and had to open it without a blowtorch. So you read your combination over and finally you said, "I think I've got it." Easier said than done.

You found another friend and dragged him to your locker to help you. But along came a senior who slammed your locker door! By the time you finally got your locker opened, the whole school knew your combination. Kim Overdevest said, "It took me a whole week to open my locker by myself."

Finally at the end of the day, when it was all over, surviving high school seemed like it just might be a possibility.

Lynette Russell and Lorle Garcia lend moral support to Lauri Gibson as she tries to open her locker.

Officers Learn Leadership

Our freshmen officers were unprepared for all the hard work their offices required. They found themselves at a loss until they gained the necessary knowledge. The freshmen class president, Suzanne Harris said, "The student council meetings were really very chaotic in the beginning of the year, but as the year progressed it calmed down and it was easier to express our opinions. We thought that the upperclassmen would put down our ideas, but as we became less shy, we usually stated most of our ideas."

For the first time, the freshmen officers experienced the responsibility of making their own decisions. As Brady Buckingham, secretary, said, "In junior high, we didn't make any of our own decisions. Our teachers basically made them for us. But here we made our own decisions on things like the Wine and Cheese. We decided what we wanted to sell, borrowed the money, and paid it back."

They put a lot of time into helping making R.H.S. a better place to be. They gained experience in leadership and realized the significance of their responsibilities. They were responsible for fund-raisers, calling and running class meetings, attending executive student council meetings, keeping track of the money and products to be sold, and directing the class of 1990.

Freshman Runs His Way To Varsity

He was running down the track ahead of the pack, all alone. They cheered him on as he crossed the finish line. To their surprise, he was a freshman, the only freshman on the Varsity Cross Country team. His name? Saul Alanis.

"It's fun being the only freshman on the team!" Saul said happily. While Saul was still on the J.V. Cross Country team he won three first place medals in three weeks.

Saul's training included running everyday before and after school for three to four hours a day. He ran an average of five to eight miles a day.

He liked Cross Country because it was a sport that combined mental thought with physical strength.

When Saul was running nothing else mattered to him. He felt great after he finished his run and accomplished his goal.

Saul worked hard to achieve his goals and medals. "He shows great potential in Cross Country," said Coach Bruce Edwards.

As November draws closer, Mr. Gerald DeYoung works diligently on his campaign.

DeYoung For Assembly!

If we were to describe social science teacher, Gerald DeYoung, we would have to say that he was very hardworking and dedicated. Not only did he teach his classes, but he also spent a lot of time preparing his campaign to run for State Assembly.

Mr. DeYoung ran against incumbent Gary Condit who was considered to be stiff competition. Mr. DeYoung ran because "I wanted to be sure that all other candidates were faced with opposition and that their views on issues, along with mine, were brought out to public view."

Although the campaign didn't leave much spare time, it paid off in the end. Along with his students, Mr. DeYoung benefited from his hard work. Many of his classes were centered around politics and his first-hand experience made his classes even more enjoyable for students, and much easier for him to teach. He credited teaching with helping him speak in front of large groups and getting a point across in an effective manner.

Students were proud of Mr. DeYoung and his accomplishments. "After having Mr. DeYoung, I am aware of how important it is for people to be involved," commented junior Donald Rose.

Unfortunately Mr. DeYoung didn't win the election last November, but he did say that it "was a good excuse for becoming involved in not just the community but in the county."

T.V. and Movie Teachers vs. Real Teachers

How accurate are the portrayals of teachers in television shows and movies such as "Welcome Back Kotter" and "Teachers"? Most teachers at R.H.S. agreed that the teachers in television were unrealistic.

When t.v. or movies focused on the teachers, they were infallible. They didn't deal with grading papers, schedule changes, or any of the work teachers actually did. When t.v. or movies focused on the students, the teacher was their "nemesis" and an incompetent buffoon.

Mr. James Barker said, "The teachers appeared uncaring, uninvolved, or more or less unintelligent."

"Teachers in television don't deal with the real problem of discipline," stated Mr. Gerald DeYoung.

Mrs. Susan Rich did not totally agree with this. She thought shows that highlighted the teacher such as "Welcome Back Kotter" had a positive image. "We looked great in 'Welcome Back Kotter.' The teacher really cared for the students."

"Movie and t.v. teachers are inhuman; the teachers in real life are human," said Junior Lewis Compton. One current t.v. show that did show teachers were human was "Head of the Class," where Howard Hesseman played a teacher who dealt with such problems as class morale, social adjustment, and practical jokes.

Many students agreed that t.v. and movies didn't show the good side of the teachers. The negative side was almost always emphasized. Senior Traci Ramos summarized, "The movies don't show good teachers who are capable of doing their jobs right."

Dedication:

Teachers Have What It Takes

Teachers walked into the classroom the first day with books in their hands, chalk in their pockets, and new lesson plans for the year. Some teaching classes they never had taught before, some at a school they had never taught at before. All of them heavily involved in school activities. Dedication was what made R.H.S. teachers stand out.

Being a teacher was a tough enough job by itself, imagine being an advisor, coach, and counselor at the same time. The amount of effort and dedication that teachers put into the students and the campus was unbelievable.

Why did teachers become so involved with the school? "By being the cheerleader advisor, I got to know everyone," expressed new teacher Ms. Alana Bonucelli.

Teachers weren't just involved in coaching and advising clubs. Many students agreed that a teacher was someone who put in a lot of time after school for the benefit of the students. "Dedicated teachers inspire students to learn more," junior Roxanne Jackson said.

"I feel that education does not end when the bell rings, but when the students fully comprehend the subject," said science teacher Mr. Rick Rule, who spent many hours after school helping his students.

Another staff member who spent many hours after school was Ms. Sandra Barnes, the yearbook advisor. She stayed until five every night, sometimes longer, and even weekends. "Doing the best job possible required extra effort and time," she stated.

Expensive cameras are Ms. Sandra Barnes favorite toys, as she explains the process of using one to yearbook students.

Smiling with joy and squinting in disgust, sophomores Kristie Shannon and Hello Brasil try to get everything organized before the sophomore drawing.

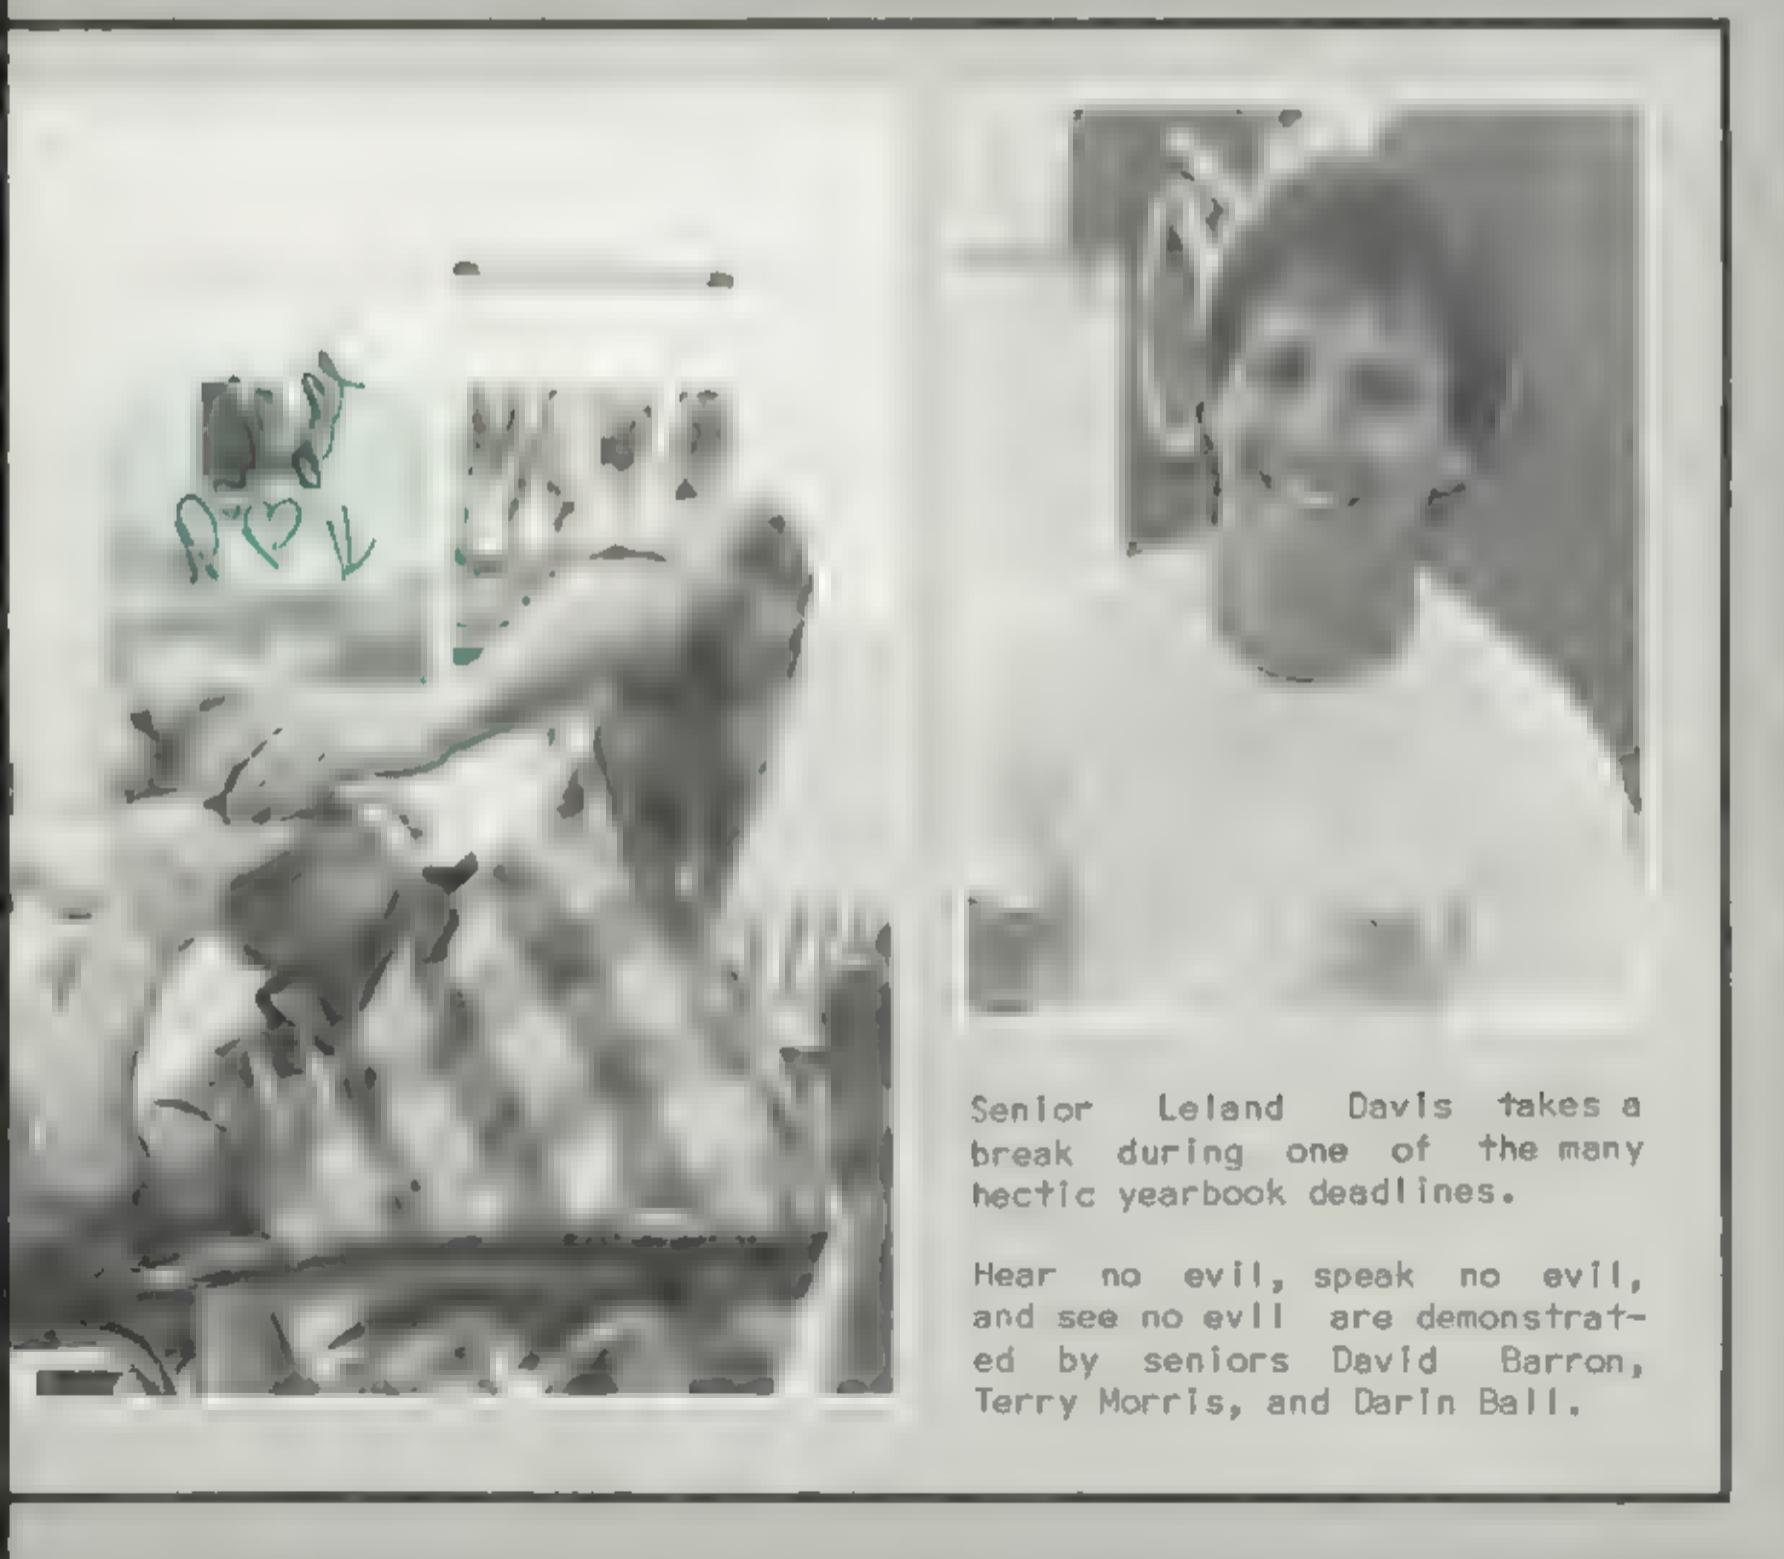

"Ten minutes left and I still can't find my black shoes. I know they were here in my closet last weekend. Maybe I should've cleaned my closet three weeks ago like my mom said. Cuck! Oh, there they are."

During the summer when students were so unorganized with messy rooms and being late for dates, life seemed great. Beaches, junk food, shorts and tank tops and tans to show them off. Boy, that was the life!

World events often plagued students' life. One were tragic, others mystified the nation. People destroyed their lives by abusing alcohol and other drugs. Marcel Avila stated, "People who take drugs are ruining their lives."

The students at R.H.S. had many ways of dealing with reality during the school year. Things such as dating, friends, vacations helped relieve the pressures of daily life. But when the real world just got too complicated, they crawled in bed and pulled the covers up over their heads. A student's life wasn't always as simple as finding a black pair of shoes in ten minutes.

Getting Away From It All

Summertime can probably be described as the most enjoyable time for teenagers. It was the time we looked forward to the most. We concentrated so hard all through the school year on planning out the summer that we sometimes neglected our school work.

The summer just went by so fast! "I was glad when it came, but it's just too short!" commented sophomore Joaquin Santos.

On the other hand, some completely insane people disliked summer. Who didn't like summer? "It was too hot! I liked the winter," commented sophomore Shelle Cantwell.

There were so many things to do. First there was summer camp. But camp had changed. Now camp helped students improve their skills in cheerleading, yearbook, band, sports, and leadership.

Most people didn't realize that summer vacations would probably be the longest vacations they ever got. For those students who worked, summer was just another season. They didn't get a three month vacation. Senior Sean May, who worked at Oakdale Equipment Rental said, "It gave me something better to do than just sit around. I liked making the money that enabled me to do some of the things I wanted to do."

Other people didn't have as much time to do what they wanted because they went to summer school. "Summer school was different because it mixed students from both Riverbank and Oakdale High Schools," commented Athena Brekke, sophomore.

Like it or not, summer had to end sooner or later. The end came when it was time to shop for new school clothes. Students had to physically prepare for school, but mentally they stayed unprepared because the beginning of school signaled the end of summer vacation.

In Your Own Private World

As I tried to open my eyes, I felt a slight tickle on the tip of my nose. My eyes opened, and I noticed a green, leafy plant directly in front of my face. My eyes care into focus as I scanned the odd surroundings and saw things that reminded me of a strange jungle in the middle of Africa. Where could I be?

"Breakfast is ready!" My ears rang as I realized where I was.

"I'll be down in a minute, Mom! Wow, it's about time for another cleaning job!"

Does this sound familiar? Did you wake up to a wild jungle, or to a room like that of a perfectly organized operating room? A person's room was much more than a place to sleep and change clothes. It was a habitat ultimately designed to reflect one's personality. A bedroom was a place where one could express himself or herself with humor, wit, and even sarcasm.

Alana Bonucelli stated, "My bedroom is the only room in the house that is actually mine. It is a reflection of me because it is very feminine and there are flowers everywhere."

Lance Lindsey spoke of his room with pride and told us of its cleanliness, portraying the organized person that he was. He set a good example for those who only cleaned their rooms because of their parents' threats.

A bedroom was often a fortress against the outside world's intrusions. It sometimes was the only place where one could relax or be with his or her innermost thoughts. However, there were some who weren't able to take advantage of this. Dianira Garcia unfortunately had to share her room and was rarely able to find the of privacy she needed.

Reflecting one's personality was just what a bedroom did. Without this special habitat, teens would not have had a place to go to get away from life's toils and tribulations.

Dating Update

"Are you busy Saturday night?"

"I'll have to check my calendar." (She knows it's empty.)

"Would you like to see a movie?"

"...And dinner afterwards?...aa...I mean, sure, I guess I can squeeze you in," replied inexperienced Ingrid to Harmless Harvey.

The dating scene had changed quite a bit over the past twenty years. Changes like who asked who, where the couple went, and what time they returned. In the 60's, the typical guy would have worn slacks, a nice shirt, and the "key essential," a sweater. The average girl would have worn a micro-mini skirt or a long gauzy dress. People today would dress up in the latest fashion, wearing their nicest clothes or just a casual look, which was probably a pair of shorts and a t-shirt.

However, one thing remained the same and that was the attraction between a boy and a girl, which was as strong as ever. Just about everything was considered a "fun" date, from eating popcorn in a movie, to cruising McHenry in your new/used car.

The highlight of the evening was always when that special someone gave you that long-awaited kiss!

"Gee, I sure had a groovy time tonight, Harvey."

"Me too, Ingrid, and wasn't the popcorn super? I sure would like it if you would accompany me to the game next Friday?"

"That would be MARVEY...Harvey!"

"I guess I'll see you then."

"I guess so."

"Well...um...goodnight."

"Goodnight."

Seniors Susan Valencia and Markus Reinhardt get acquainted over a soda at the donut shop.

Carrie Long and Kory Gilbert dance solo at the assembly for the Air Force Rock-n-Roll band.

After being hit by Cupid's arrow, sophomore Jeff Mulkey and freshman Shannon Cox sit back to enjoy a Friday night basketball game.

What was your most embarrassing moment on a date?

"I was dancing, getting down, and my pants ripped," replied freshmen Corey Winters.

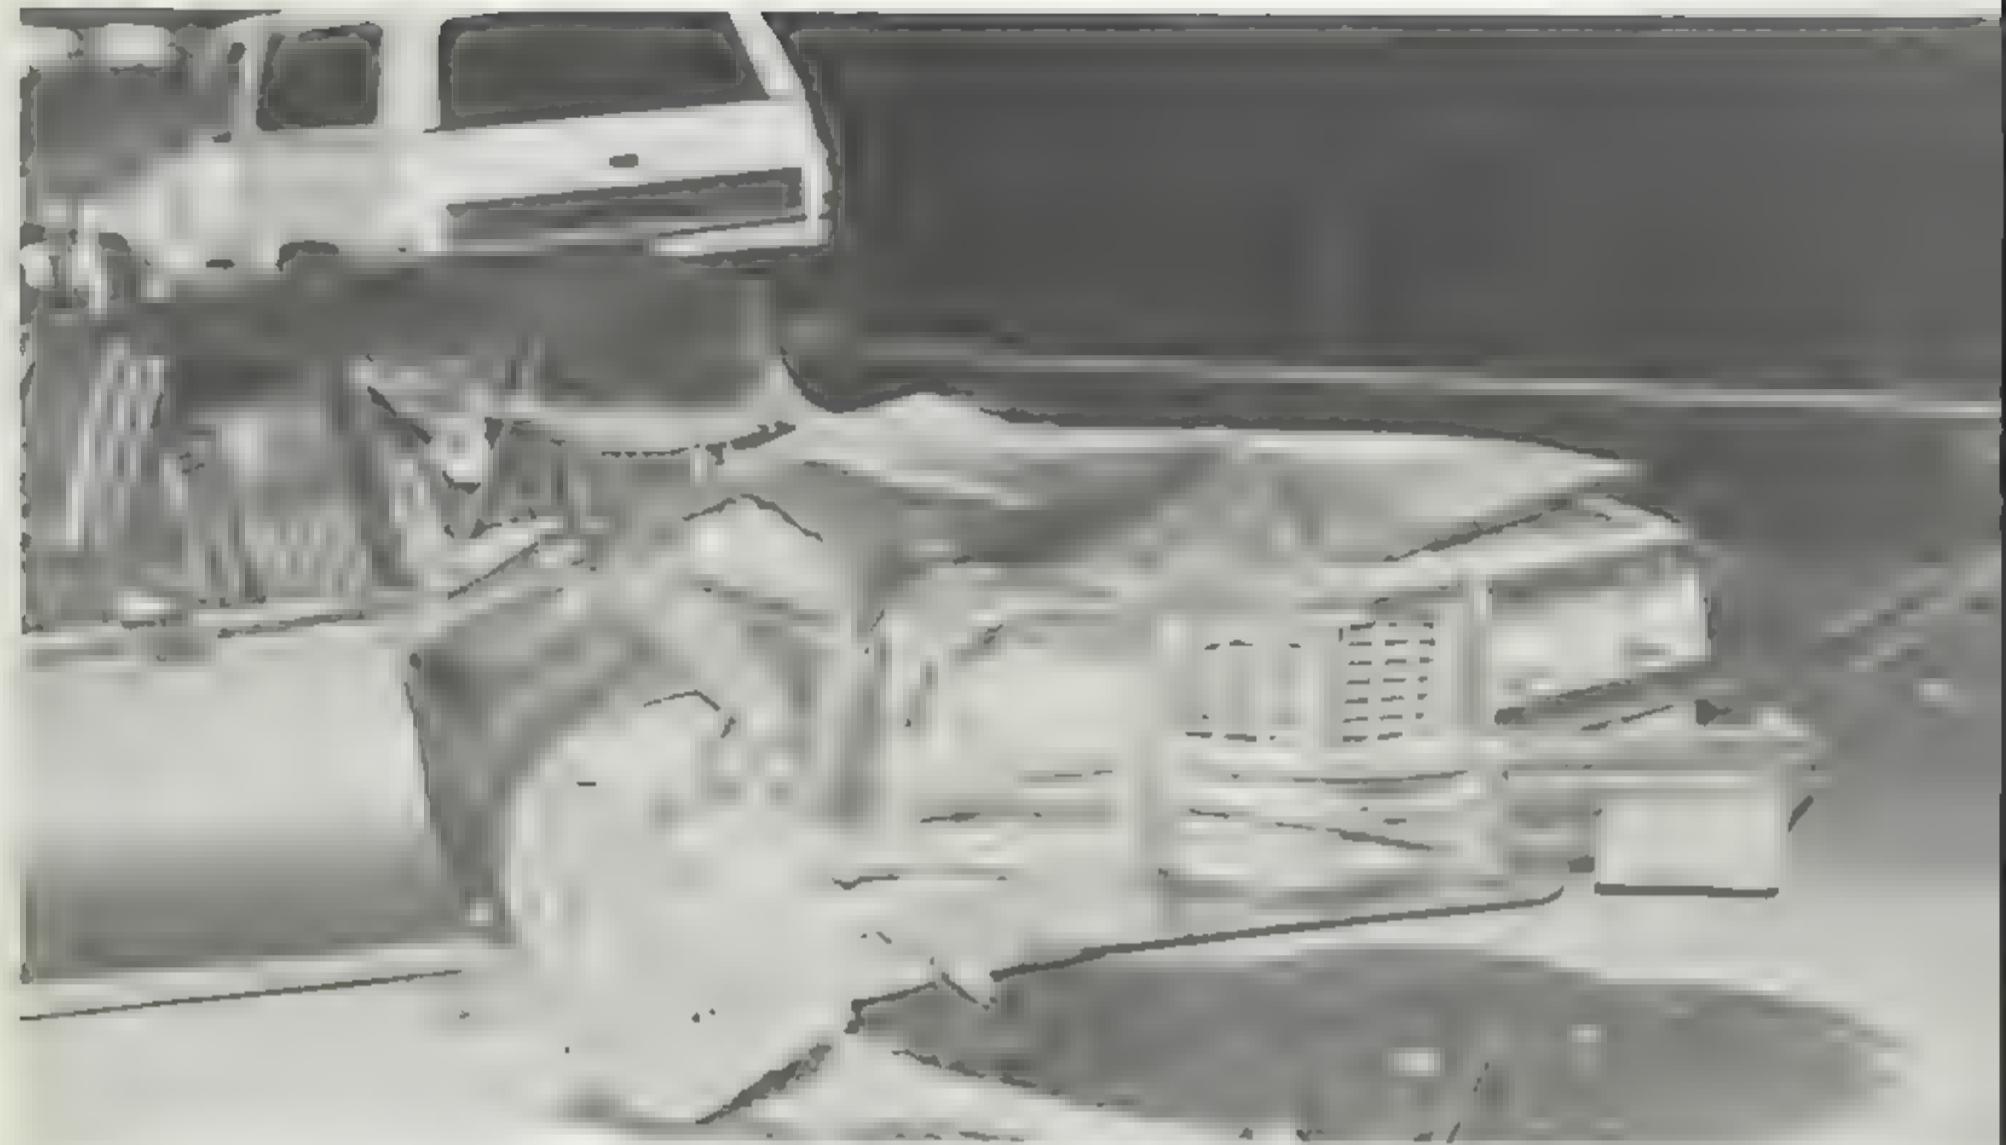

"...He went to put his arm around me, and I jumped and hit him," commented senior Martha Harrison.

"When I first went out with Lee, we went to Taco Bell and I got a burrito. I took a bite, and all the beans fell on my lap," admitted senior Tamra Fitzpatrick.

"David and I went out and I spilled coke all over myself," stated sophomore Shelly Brown.

Hope For A Second Chance

Red lights flashed. Sirens wailed. Tires screeched to a halt in front of the emergency room. The paramedics leaped out and wheeled Bobby through the swinging doors. People grabbed in all directions for instruments that they believed would help in saving 17-year-old Bobby's life. "Looks like an overdose," said the woman behind the blue surgical mask.

Isolated by their fear, Bobby's parents waited in suspense. His mother sat anxiously on the edge of the plastic yellow seat while his father paced mindlessly on the cracked tile. The single question in their minds was why? Why would their dear son do something so drastically stupid? They thought they knew their son. They thought he could handle his problems. They thought everything was fine. But they thought wrong.

Most students weren't aware of how serious drugs were. Some didn't even realize that it could happen to them until it actually did. There were numerous reasons that led to the taking of drugs. Among these were parents' divorce, the opposite sex, peer pressure, grades, and failure of not being the ideal teenager. All of these were pressures that students struggled with from day to day at school and at home. Students felt that if they took drugs, relief from these pressures would result. In the end, drugs didn't solve anything, but only added another problem to their list.

Junior Manuel Dias expressed a strong opinion against drugs and said, "They make your body function improperly. People who take them are stupid because they'll regret it in the long run."

"I think people shouldn't take them because they just mess up their lives and the lives of their loved ones," said junior Isabel Scoto.

Many students agreed taking drugs wasn't smart. Still, the biggest drug problem at R.H.S. was alcohol. However, thanks to the S.A.D.D. program, which publicized the consequences of drinking and driving and made it "o.k. to say no," many students did. S.A.D.D. advisor Laura Simons said, "This year students showed the most interest in S.A.D.D.--more than they have in the past four years. There was much more active participation and concern."

Throughout the year rock stars, athletes, actors, actresses, and other celebrities made commercials against the use of drugs and drinking and driving. These commercials were shown on television, including MTV, a favorite channel of teenagers. Through the expressed reality of drugs by these idolized people, many students saw that drugs were physically and mentally corruptive. Yet, others still denied facing the truth, which was that you couldn't find answers at the bottom of a beer can.

Fortunately, drugs weren't a big problem at R.H.S. and no one was seriously injured because of them. However, many students all over the country died because of alcohol or other drugs. They didn't have a second chance.

Extra! Extra! Read All About It

Extra! Extra! Read all about it! Who went around the world without a stop? Why were the dealings with Iran kept secret? Have people forgotten about racism and how Martin Luther King and followers liberated this country? Who has stood in the middle of New York harbor, guarding and protecting us through 18 presidents and 5 wars? These and other national and state events affected our world at R.H.S.

The Iran Connection. Who knew? Did Reagan try to hide these dealings with Iran because he was afraid of the bad image he would create? "I thought Reagan made a big mistake. I understood why he did it, but I didn't agree. I thought Reagan knew what was going on. There was no way that Colonel North could have done everything by himself," stated freshman Wassim Absood. Maybe Reagan had good reasons for sending aid to Iran. It seemed the deal was to send arms to Iran, and then hostages would be released from Beirut. It was reported by Attorney General Edwin Meese that up to $30 million dollars in secret profits from this weapons deal had somehow been diverted to support The Nicaraguan Contras. Lt. Col. Oliver North and National Security Advisor John Poindexter resigned after being held fully responsible for the arms scandal.

Racial Discrimination. A serious matter came to the top of the headline again. We experienced deja vu concerning the racial discrimination against minority groups. In Howard Beach, New York, there was an incident concerning some black persons who were brutally beaten by some white teenage boys for walking into a cafe to use the phone. One of the black boys, trying to escape, was hit by a car and instantly killed.

Celebration of the Statue of Liberty. Stars and stripes, fireworks and music, people and laughter; a scene that demonstrated loyalty and dedication to America. The Statue of Liberty was restored to its natural state of beauty. Four years of time, effort, and $69 million in renovation went into rebuilding her and it all paid off at the celebration, when she was unveiled at New York Harbor in front of 6 million people.

The Incredible Voyage. This was the voyage of a revolutionary airplane weighing less than two thousand pounds. Dick Rutan and Jeana Yeager were the pilots of the plane that flew around the world without stopping, even for fuel. One reason was that the airplane actually flapped its wings which helped conserve fuel. One complaint the pilots had was the small amount of space. This was unavoidable because the plane could not be over a certain weight. Each pilot took his/her turn but it seemed they were at the wheel for more than one day at a time. The two pilots were joyously happy when they reached the final leg of the journey. They had at last conquered the challenge of flying around the world nonstop.

In the beginning, students had expectations that every dream of the perfect school year would come true. For some, dreams consisted of being the star varsity football player. Other students dreamed of the perfect date for the prom.

When school started, it seemed like forever until summer. But all the activities, sports, club trips, various conventions and all the different holidays made the school year go by quickly. And before students knew it, the school year was over and summer was here.

Freshmen were scared and nervous, but by June they felt at home. It was a hard year for most sophomores, while juniors had cars now, and were having fun. Some seniors were sad at leaving their second home, but were still happy to graduate.

As the year progressed, most students discovered that instead of depending on others to have a good year, they were responsible for fulfilling each dream themselves. In the end, having fun was "all up to you."

Some unlucky chemistry student finds pain and embarrassment at the end of a lab because of a joke played on him.

The picture of empty hallways is something rarely seen at R.H.S. until the end of the school year.

Junior Sophia Diaz puckers up for a kiss when working on the junior homecoming float.

The new Archive staff members joined returning staff members in June of 1986 to plan the up and coming Archive. They spent long hours on fundraisers from car washes to selling chocolate bunnies. The staff discussed various options before finally settling on the theme "Are We Having Fun Yet?...It's All Up to You!"

This was the year to improve our book even more. Staff members did this by attending camps and workshops. At the Bay Area Yearbook Seminar (B.A.Y.S) '87, Traci Ramos, Roxanne Jackson, Dina Ortegon, and Heather Oliver took fourth place in the mock up competition. The Central California Scholastic Press Association (CCSPA) Fall Workshop and Jostens All Workshop provided lots of ideas that helped us get off to a good start. At the CCSPA Write Offs in May, the Archive took third place. Staff members also attended the state Journalism Education Association (JEA) Convention in Anaheim and the national JEA Convention in Portland.

The Archive was printed by Jostens Printing and Publishing in Visalia, California, on 80 lb. glossy paper. The cover design by Jostens' artist Pam Sue was silk screened and laminated.

Once again we worked with Les Peterson, a representative of Jostens. Special thanks to Mr. Peterson for all his support and for coming to pick up our pages, then waiting while we hurriedly finished them.

The book was printed with the use of CBM computers using the Word Processing program on a Commodore 6400 Letter Quality Printer, all furnished by our own R.H.S. computer room. Thanks to Mr. Morris Chandler for putting up with us, answering our questions, and helping out! The headlines were composed in a "Bold by The Ink" font.

Black and white photos were taken and produced by the Archive darkroom staff. Special thanks to the Riverbank News and Ross Farrow who let us use sports photos and Shoob Photography for taking undergraduate and some sports photos. Most senior portraits and all homecoming pictures were taken by Harris Photography.

The Archive staff proves that they can have fun by surprising advisor Sandi Barnes on January 22, her birthday.

ARCHIVE STAFF

Advisor: Sandra Barnes

Editor: Julie Larson

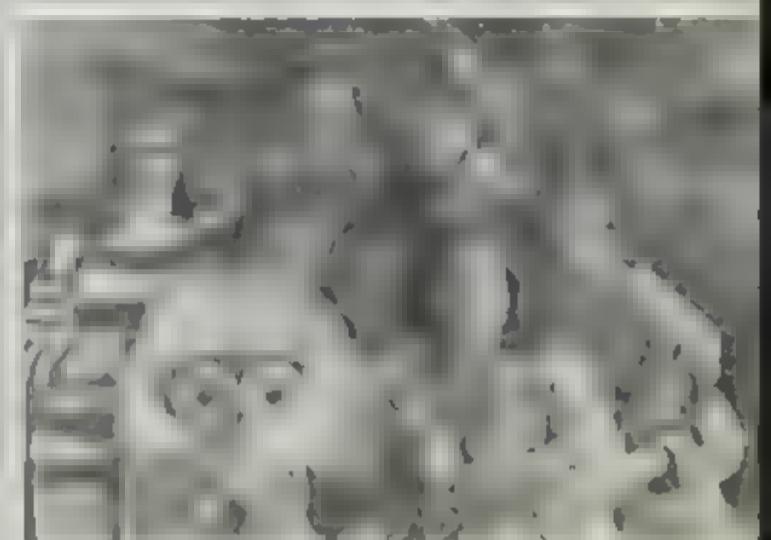

Copy Editor: Dina Ortegon

Staff: Heather Oliver, Roxanne Jackson, Kristi Reeves, Jennifer Allen, Alissa Cox, Alana Potter, Athena Brekke, Kim Davis, Allison McGrane, Kim Overdevest, Angela Talbert, Kristie Shannon

Dark Room Staff: Hopey Ortegon, Sam Perez, Mike Barba, Deeanna Moyle

Advertising Staff: Traci Ramos, Rachel Kerr, Brady Buckingham, Helio Brasil, Karie Jordan

At the Write-A-Thon, junior Rachel Kerr changes positions while Alana Potter, freshman, picks the remains of chips out her braces.

At the state JEA convention, Archive students Kristie Shannon, Heather Oliver, Traci Ramos, Jennifer Allen, Dina Ortegon, Alissa Cox, and Roxanne Jackson say "bye."

WINNERS OR LOSERS?

The winner is always a part of the answer. The loser is always a part of the problem. The winner always has a program. The loser always has an excuse. The winner sees an answer in every problem.

The loser sees a problem in every answer. The winner says, "Here, let me do that for you."

The loser says, "That's not my job." The winner sees a green near every sandtrap.

The loser sees two sandtraps near every green.

The winner says, "It may be difficult, but it's not impossible."

The loser says, "It may be possible, but it's too difficult."

IT'S ALL UP TO YOU TO DECIDE!

One day I walked into the yearbook room and found this poem up on the chalk board. I read it and a light came on, this is what our book is all about. It belongs in the yearbook. Yes, life is made up of winners and losers, and it's all up to you to decide.

Every one of the Archive staff members are winners. They gave up their weekends, their sanity, and dodged flying rulers from Ms. Barnes to bring to the students an Archive that would be the best R.H.S. had ever seen. This book is more than mere paper and words, it's hard work and sweat.

Everyone should be on a yearbook staff once in their lives to realize that everything isn't always as easy as it looks. Good books aren't born overnight, but created with incredible dedication and work.

It's All Up To You!

Rrring....Rrring...Click, "Hello."

"I can't believe it's the first day of summer. The year went by so fast."

"I know. I remember back in January wanting the year to end and now that it's over, I think I'm going to miss it."

"Not me. I'm glad it's over."

"But we had some great dances, rallies, and other great times."

"We did?"

"Well, I did."

"I didn't go to many dances or rallies because of the ineligibility rules."

"Well, remember those girls we went out with? I'm still with that one."

"Well, not me. Remember what really happened? It turned into a soap opera!"

"Don't you have any good memories of the school year?"

"No way! Summer's the best as far as I'm concerned. Who likes teachers, learning and being told what to do?"

"Well, summer is great, but school can be just as good."

"That wasn't all it was. I made up my mind."

"What do you mean?"

"Remember? The question was, 'Are we having fun yet?' I discovered the answer."

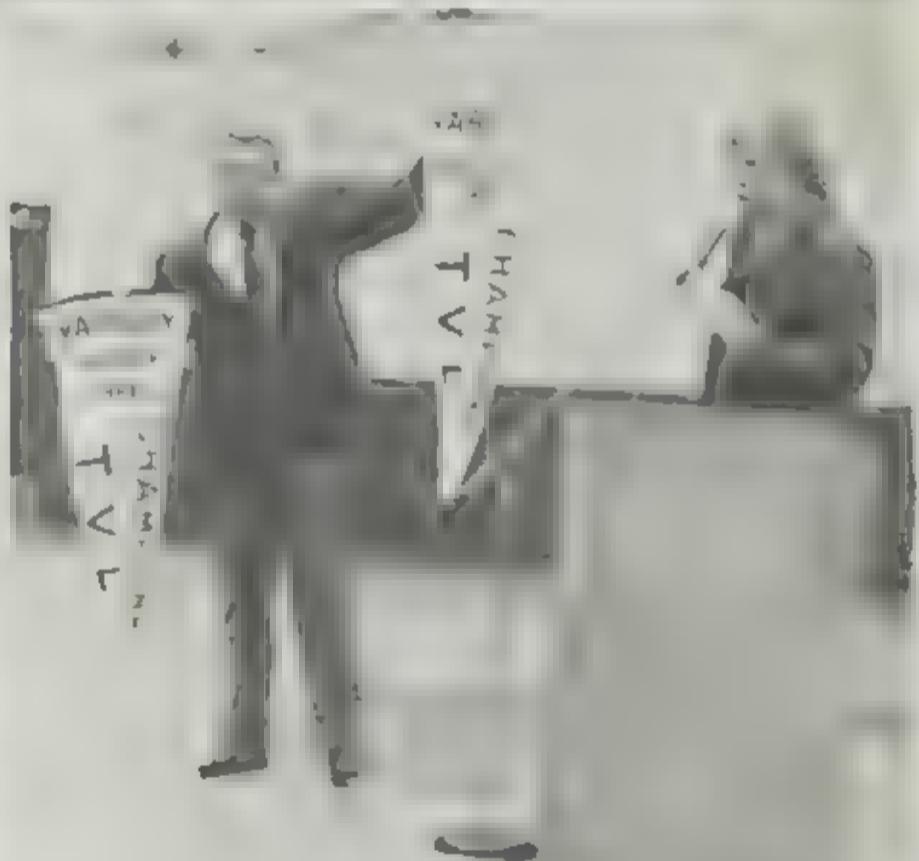

"Oh, what was the answer?"

"The answer was 'It's all up to you!'"

Students Lewis Coroton, Eric Benetrix, Darren, "None" LHS, Kelly Beate, Scott Diaz, and Lisa Callandriello show off their Advisory won at the Pumpkin Roll on Halloween.

At the Fall Awards Assembly, Athletic Director Denny Carl presents Principal Robert Peasey with the T.V., soccer and cross-country pennants.
